2 Disputes Threaten Area Boom In Building

AFL Groups Fight Over Work Rights, Bargaining Powers; Six Jobs Tied Up

Two long-smoldering local construction industry disputes have flared into the open and threaten to slow down and even tie up the Washington area's building boom.

One dispute is a jurisdictional fight between the AFL carpenters and AFL ironworkers over the right to perform certain kinds of work.

The second dispute involves the Construction Contractors' Council, an organization of contractors and subcontractors, and the AFL Building Trades Council, made up of most—but not all—the 21 AFL building crafts.

As a result of the two controversies, six construction projects of Victor R. Beauchamp, Inc., costing more than 1 million dollars, have been virtually shut down since last Thursday noon.

May Hit Others

Both disputes have for the time being been confined to the Beauchamp projects, but some Washington builders are concerned that either or both of the controversies may spread and paralyze local construction activity.

As a result of the disputes, and the ensuing work stoppages at the Beauchamp projects, the ironworkers' locals and the AFL Building Trades Council have been charged with violating the Taft-Hartley Act. The Baltimore regional office of NLRB is presently investigating the complaints.

The Beauchamp company accused the two ironworkers' unions of breaking the Taft-Hartley ban on jurisdictional strikes.

Interference Charged

The Construction Contractors Council accused the AFL Building Trades Council of illegally interfering with the company's right to select its own bargaining agent, the CCC, and with coercing the company to sign an outlawed closed-shop agreement with the union council.

The charges are being contested by the accused unions and union council.

Redhead Rushes Into Elliott's Arms at Airport

New York, July 3 (U.P.).—Elliott Roosevelt came home from Europe today and a beautiful redhead rushed into his arms.

Elliott refused to identify her and fussed and fumed when reporters asked if she would become his fourth bride. He kissed her, bundled her into a car driven by his brother, Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. (D., N. Y.), and left for an unknown destination.

The mystery girl was about five feet, six inches tall and quite shapely.

Except for the color of her hair, the mystery girl answered the description of Betty Boyd, 23-year-old fashion model from Bogalusa, La., rumored to be engaged to Elliott. Miss Boyd used to be a blonde.

Rescue Squad 'Steals' Power To Save Polio Victim in Lung

By Bob Burchette—The Washington Post

Harold Kogod in iron lung at start of dramatic trip

Harold Kogod, 12-year-old polio victim, was more of an emergency hospitalization case yesterday than the rescue agencies thought he would be.

He became an emergency when a call went out for an iron lung, desperately needed to transport him from his Northwest home to Children's Hospital.

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad hurried to the home at 2219 Observatory pl. nw. with a lung.

The next emergency came in transporting the 1800-pound lung, with Harold inside, from the Kogod home to the BCC squad truck. With the help of squadmen, District police and firemen, this, too was done.

A completely unscheduled emergency came en route to Children's

Senate Hearings on Tax Bill To Proceed Despite War Crisis

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday decided to proceed with hearings on the Administration's House-passed tax bill despite the Korean crisis but to key final action to overseas developments.

"We decided to go right through with this bill," Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) declared.

"If the world situation seriously worsens, we can of course hold the bill up at any time, even after it passes the Senate and goes to conference."

The go-ahead signal on taxes was understood to have Administration backing. Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) recommended that the committee proceed, reportedly after a talk with the President.

Lucas took the position in committee that a "balanced" tax bill would not affect revenues anyway and to proceed as planned probably would have "a good psychological effect" on the country. Leaders plainly are anxious to avoid any Capitol action that would build up a case of war jitters.

Senate hearing are scheduled to get underway Wednesday, with Treasury Secretary John Snyder on the witness stand. The committee tentatively plans to get the bill to the Senate about July 20 after morning and afternoon hearings running deep into next week, George said.

Leaders meanwhile discussed the feasibility of a Congressional recess, in lieu of a sine die adjournment, when Congress concludes present business next month.

Unless the Korean emergency is cleared up in the meanwhile, Lucas said both Houses may give leaders authority to reconvene Congress at any time. Mr. Truman has the same power under the Constitution.

"We probably will have a bill that will about balance in income and outgo, so passage will not materially affect Treasury receipts," George said.

The Georgian declined to say, however, whether he personally favors the 433 million dollars in increased taxes that the House imposed on big corporations to partially offset a billion-dollar excise-tax cut. The House made up the

Big RFC Loan In Reno Gets Probers' Ire

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A Senate committee yesterday demanded the explanation of an RFC loan of nearly a million dollars in taxpayers' funds to a Reno, Nev., hotel that derives much of its revenue from a gambling casino.

Floundering RFC officials were unable to tell the subcommittee, headed by Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.), how the loan served "the public interest," a requirement for such loans established by the Congress.

The loan was made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the swank Mapes Hotel in Reno. RFC Chairman Harley Hise and Hilton Robertson, RFC Washington examiner who recommended the loan, attempted to justify it on the ground that without it 200 hotel employes would have lost their jobs.

"That's private and not public interest," shot back Fulbright. He added that it seemed apparent, too, that the hotel would have kept operating even without the RFC loan.

Sought to Help Divorcees

Then Hise said Nevada has other industries beside gambling—and he noted many persons went to Reno for divorces and needed hotel accommodations.

"Then you were trying to help divorcees?" queried Fulbright with a grin.

"I wanted to accommodate them," Hise said.

Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) interjected, "I think that is ex-

Stork Overtakes Navy Wife, So Her Baby Is Born in Auto

At 4:30 a. m. Sunday, Chief Hospital Corpsman T. J. McDaniel was thanking his lucky stars the United States Navy had taught him a thing or two about delivering babies.

A moment before, he was winging around the west side of the Lincoln Memorial with his 26-year-old wife, Geneva, bound for Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Then Geneva calmly told her husband he had better stop the car. He did and two minutes later "my son was born in my lap," Corpsman McDaniel related yesterday.

Mrs. McDaniel treated the affair rather matter-of-factly, the proud father said, giving this sequence to the Lincoln Memorial birth scene.

"I placed the little fellow in her lap and told her to hold him. I drove to the dispensary at 19th st. and Constitution ave. ran inside and routed out a doctor. I helped him finish the operation. Two hours later she was resting comfortably at the Bethesda Naval Hospital."

Both parents are pretty baffled by the rapid-fire birth of this—their second son—Jeffrey Neel, who weighed in at 8 pounds 15½ ounces.

"Geneva was in labor only 20 minutes before we set out for the hospital," the father explained. In fact, they entertained friends until 1:30 a. m. Sunday "and Geneva was feeling fine."

Fireworks Top Fourth Celebration

Two-Hour Program At the Monument Tonight; Many Other Events Scheduled

Washingtonians—what few are left in the city—and visitors to the Nation's Capital will give a rousing "Salute to Independence" with a bigger-than-ever fireworks show at the Monument Grounds tonight.

Under the Sesquicentennial Commission banner this year, the traditional Fourth of July windup event promises fireworks enthusiasts several new touches, keyed to the Capital 150th anniversary.

Spectators will see set pieces of George Washington, Harry S. Truman, the Liberty Bell and the Spirit of '76.

The two-hour program—including four military bands, the Sesqui chorus, singing cowboys and balancing acts—will start at 7:30 p. m. A major speech by John Foster Dulles, special consultant to the State Department, will keynote the evening's activities.

"America and Korea"

Dulles, who returned from Korea and Japan last week, will speak on "America and Korea—the Interdependence of Independence." Senator William J. Fulbright will introduce the statesman.

Those bound for the Monument Grounds may purchase seats, 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children, or take potluck at finding free standing space outside the roped-off section. Fireworks will begin at 9 p. m. sharp.

Italian-born Frank Davito, who has set off fireworks displays since President Harding's time, told a reporter yesterday: "Wait till you see our new historical numbers and the aerial bombs. Our show is bigger than ever."

Only question mark last night was the weather. Some cloudiness, a high humid 90 degrees with possibly scattered showers in the afternoon or evening was the forecast.

Some Miss Holiday

Because of the Korean crisis, some employes in the State and Defense Departments will work today. The Defense Department said thousands will work, just as they did over the weekend. Some divisions are working around the clock.

Yesterday throngs of tourists trooped through the corridors of a Capitol practically deserted by by vacationing legislators.

Stay-at-home residents had a quiet day. Pop stayed next to the living room fan or in the backyard hammock. Mom had the icebox well stacked with cold cuts and salad materials for picnic suppers.

Union Station, bus depots and the air lines were ready for homeward-bound travelers, starting early this afternoon.

First Combat Since End of World War II

U. S. and Australian Pilots Pound Rear Area to Shut Off Reinforcements

Bulletin

Tokyo (Tuesday), July 4 (AP).— American troops went into action against North Korean forces yesterday for the first time. General MacArthur's Headquarters announced today.

A spokesman said a detailed announcement would be issued shortly on this first combat for American infantry since the end of World War II.

The officer said the Americans last night reached the area of Suwon, 23 miles south of conquered Seoul.

Tokyo (Tuesday), July 4 (AP).—The United States Navy announced today that an American light cruiser had sunk six North Korean vessels, bringing to 11 the number sunk by this same cruiser in two days.

The Navy previously had announced sinking of five North Korean motor torpedo boats, but had given no details.

The name of the American cruiser was not disclosed. Dispatches several days previously, however, had mentioned the cruiser Juneau as operating in Korean waters.

Meanwhile, the Communist invaders of South Korea were within 6 miles of the town of Suwon today, but front and headquarters accounts indicated that they had virtually halted while gathering strength for a new all-out assault.

Far-sweeping American and Australian air attacks contributed to the enemy slowdown and forced the North Koreans to rush up heavier antiaircraft defenses for Red-conquered Seoul.

[The United Press said reconnaissance planes reported the North Korean Communists have started preparing defensive positions along the Han River south of Seoul in apparent expectation of an American offensive.

[Advices up to 12:50 p. m. (10:50 P. M. EDT Monday) indicated that the threat of an American attack had brought the Communist invaders virtually to a halt so far as big movements were concerned.]

General MacArthur's communique of Tuesday morning said American and Australian fighters in a series of sorties Monday destroyed seven enemy tanks and damaged five, destroyed 22 trucks and damaged 29, shot down one LA-7 and one Yak-9 fighter, blew up an ammunition dump and destroyed one locomotive and damaged three.

The Yak-9 and LA-7 planes are

'Direct Aggression' Charged

Russia Demands U. S. Take Troops Out of Korea At Once

London, (Tuesday), July 4 (AP).—Russia today demanded the immediate withdrawal of American armed forces from Korea.

A lengthy statement by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko charged also that the United States was making war against the Korean people and carrying out "direct aggression" against both Korea and Communist-led China.

The statement, distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass, claimed the United States was seeking to gain control of all of Korea for its use as a military and strategic bridgehead in the Far East. It continued:

"Having taken that road, the United States Government violated the peace, and by so doing, demonstrated that not only is it not striving for the consolidation of peace but, on the contrary, is the enemy of peace."

"The United States Government is revealing step by step its aggressive plans in Korea. First it announced that United States interference into Korea's affairs would be restricted to the mere sending of military and other materials.

"Then it was announced that air and naval forces would also be sent but without ground troops. Subsequently they announced the sending of United States ground forces to Korea.

"It is also known that first the United States Government declared that American armed forces would take part only in operations in the territory of South Korea. However, only a few days later the American Air Force transferred its operations onto the territory of North Korea and attacked Pyongyang and other towns.

"All this shows the U. S. Government is drawing the United States into war to an ever greater extent but, being forced to consider the unwillingness of the American people to be drawn into a new military adventure, it is gradually pushing the country step by step into an open war."

Korea Action Stressed as U.N. Fight

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The United Nation itself began proclaiming to the Korean people yesterday, in their own language, that the Korean war was an international fight for peace.

Ever since June 25, when the Security Council first called for a cease-fire, the U. N. has been broadcasting straight news accounts of its own counter-measures.

Its broadcasts have gone out in 23 languages, including Korean, over transmitters of the Voice of America, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and the British Broadcasting Corporation.

But last night, at 8 o'clock Korean time, the U. N. added something new to its story. Listeners in Korea heard this preamble to the U. N. broadcasts in their own language:

"This is the United Nations. This is the United Nations.

"Forty governments, representing almost a billion people, have pledged their support to the United Nations' action in Korea.

"The United Nations decision calls for a truce and a withdrawal of North Korean forces to the 38th parallel.

"The United Nations is fighting for peace! Now, here is the news from U. N. headquarters at Lake Success."

This preamble will be repeated every day, at the beginning of the U. N.'s 15-minute broadcasts, until the cease-fire is obeyed. Its object is to make clear that the Korean war is not just an American operation, as Communist

Amphibious, Air Units Going From West Coast

May Reach Front In About 16 Days; Naval Task Group Headed for Far East

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Marine Corps amphibious troops and additional Air Force Superforts and Navy task forces are being moved to the Korean war front.

A Navy spokesman announced that Leathernecks of the First Marine Division at Camp Pendleton, Calif., and its supporting air wing at El Toro, Calif., are sailing by fast transport for the Far East.

While there was no official word of the size of the force, it was believed that a reinforced regimental landing team and several squadrons of fighters and attack planes are involved. Officials said they should be available for MacArthur's use in about 16 days.

Almost simultaneously, the Air Force disclosed that "several" additional B-29 Superfort bomber units of the Strategic Air Command are flying to Far East bases. They will be from the 92d Bomb Wing at Spokane, Wash., and the 22d Wing at March Field, Calif.

While the Air Force did not say how many planes are being sent,

The Korean situation was reviewed but Eben Ayers, presidential secretary, said no decisions were reached.

Capitol to Readopt Security Measure Used in Last War

The Capitol is going back to a security measure it used in World War II, David Lynn, Capitol architect, said last night.

Starting Wednesday, no one will be permitted to enter or leave the Capitol outside of regular visiting hours, 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. seven days a week, without showing an identification pass.

Lynn said the passes, used during World War II, are now being reissued. Temporarily he said, some are being distributed without photographs. Distribution will be completed by Wednesday.

Lynn indicated that a meeting of the Capitol Police Board, now scheduled for July 10, may produce added police guards at Capitol entrances. There are now about 160 men on the Hill force.

Arlington GI Ignores Threat Of Court-Martial to Fight Reds

Pfc. Robert V. Robey, Due for Trip Home, Chooses Korea Instead

When 21-year-old Pfc. Robert V. Robey of Arlington, Va., was shot at yesterday in Korea, he wouldn't let a pending discharge or his sergeant's threat of court-martial keep him from fighting back.

Robey, one of the first Washington area men known to be in combat in the Korean warfare, was scheduled to leave yesterday for the United States for discharge.

Instead, the infantryman joined American troops in Korea, ignoring court-martial threats from his sergeant for disobeying orders.

Robey's decision to stay and fight came as five to seven airplanes subjected his unit to a vicious, 25-minute strafing and rocket attack, according to Tom Lambert, Associated Press reporter.

This was the second time Robey was up for discharge. His sister, Mrs. Florence Riley, 1529 N. Fairfax dr., Arlington, Va., said he was to be discharged June 15 and to leave Japan on May 20, but the Army postponed the separation.

Robey enlisted October 31, 1947, at Fort Meade, Md. He was assigned to the Ninth Infantry Division at Fort Dix, N. J., and later Camp Stoneman, Calif. He went overseas on May 5, 1948, joining the 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division.

Mrs. Riley said Robey was

Ammunition Train Of So. Korea Blown Up In Miscalculation

With American Troops in Korea, Tuesday, July 4. (U.P.).—American combat soldiers got their baptism of fire Monday when four planes, with Australian markings, blew up a South Korean ammunition train by mistake.

One American was wounded. At least two South Koreans were killed. Three American trucks and at least eight other vehicles were hit. It was one of war's miscalculations and it occurred along the shifting North-South Korean battle front.

The Navy release did not fix the exact area but it was understood to be between Ft. Walton and Destin, Fla.—six miles apart—and about three miles at sea.

U. S. Aggressor, U. N. Told by North Korea

Lake Success, July 3 (AP).—Communist North Korea charged the United States today with "barefaced aggression" and protested violently to the United Nations against "American armed intervention in Korea."

The protest, one of the bitterest documents against the U. S. yet received in the U. N., was written in Russian and was signed by Pak Hen Nen, North Korean Foreign Minister. The note did not mention the Soviet Union, which the West has charged with instigatng the war.

North Korea is not a member the U. N. but the U. N. sent the protest to the 11 members of the Security Council (Russia included) because the North Koreans are a party to the conflict.

Came Via Moscow

The U. N. sent copies of the Security Council cease-fire order to Pyongyang, North Korea, via Moscow. The note received today came from Pyongyang via Moscow and Tangiers to New York.

The North accused the United States of brutally bombing its peaceful population and of trying to cover its intervention in Korea with the name of the United Nations.

The North Koreans also claimed military successes in the first week of the war.

They said in the long document that their army had cleared the "enemy" (South Korean forces) from a large area of the southern half of Korea and "liberated Seoul, the national capital."

Seoul was the capital of the Republic of Korea and had jurisdiction only over that part of Korea south of the thirty-eighth parallel. North Korea had claimed Pyongyang as its capital, and this is the first comment noted here that the Northern forces may be planning to set up Seoul as the capital of all Communist Korea.

The Northern document also said friendly partisans in the South cut the main railway line from the harbor of Pusan. The U. N. Commission of Korea, which has reported to the U. N. that the Communist North Koreans started the war on June 25, has its headquarters in Pusan.

Pursuing the Enemy

Finally, the North Korean note said the "gallant" North Korean army is continuing to pursue the enemy, which it said is "fleeing in disorder to the south."

This report, dated July 2, was received at the U. N. as dispatches from South Korea indicated the Northern army apparently had been stalled by American and Australian air attacks.

The Communists dusted off old anti-American phrases in the note. They said the "American imperialists" and their South Korean proteges unleashed the civil war in Korea and thus had committed a desperate mistake. They said the bankruptcy of the regime of the South Korean puppets of the United States has become obvious. They added the American "imperialists" wanted to drown the freedom of Korea in the blood of its patriots but that these Americans "will not frighten the freedom-loving Korean people."

"The government of the Korean People's Democratic Republic (the north) and the whole Korean nation resolutely protest against American armed intervention in Korea, against the barbarous bombardments of Korean towns and villages, against the inhuman slaughter of peaceful citizens," the note said.

40 Indorsers

The number of U. N. members indorsing a Security Council call for action against North Korean aggression rose to 40 today with messages from Ethiopia and Sweden. Ethiopia was the victim of aggression by Mussolini's Italy in one of the incidents leading to the Second World War.

The 40 members gave the Council the support of two thirds of the 59 U. N. members, a margin big enough to pass any proposal through the General Assembly. Those backing the Council are the 21 American republics, including the United States, Britain, Nationalist China, India, Belgium, the Netherlands, Sweden, New Zealand, Australia, the Philippines, Turkey, Pakistan, Canada, Luxembourg, South Africa, Greece, Thailand, Denmark, Israel and Ethiopia.

France and Norway, Security Council members, voted for the action but their governments have not yet indicated what they will do to carry it out. Italy, a nonmember because of Russian vetoes, also indorsed it.

On the other side of the fence were the Soviet Union, Poland and Czechoslovakia, with sharp protests notes. Yugosalavia voted against the resolution, but has not acted further.

Sitting on the fence was Egypt, which abstained. Yemen, apparently following Egypt's lead, merely responded with a polite acknowledgement to Secretary General Trygve Lie of copies of the Council decision.

Russian makes with good World War II records. They are not the very latest Russian types, however. Jane's All the World's Aircraft, recognized source book for plane information, describes both as single-seat fighters, the Yak-9 capable of a maximum speed of 350 miles an hour and the LA-7, 373 mph.

The Yak-9, with much wood in its construction, has a 1210-horsepower 12-cylinder engine. Jane's says its armament is a 20-mm. cannon in the nose and two machine guns mounted in the cowling. The LA-7 has an 1850-HP 14-cylinder radial engine. It carries two 20-mm. cannon and two machine guns, with provision for bombs below the wings and one 37-mm. cannon below the engine.

Ten B-29 heavy bombers for the second consecutive day attacked Yonpo airfield, 135 miles inside North Korea near the East Coast.

Invaders Bomb Kimpo Field

The invader Yak fighters strafed and bombed South Korean defense troops near Kimpo airfield 16 miles west of Seoul, and the Suwon airstrip 23 miles south of Seoul.

MacArthur's account of ground operations tended strongly to support the word of American officers in Korea that the invader drive had slowed to a shuffle and almost a halt after racing ahead for eight days.

On Sunday, the communique said, two North Korean tank and artillery columns thrust southeast out of Seoul in a hurried attempt to outflank Suwon on the East.

They reached Yongin, six miles east of Suwon, and Kumyangjangni, 12 miles east, while another invader column was moving about 30 miles east of Suwon.

No all-out offensive was reported, however, and the communique said: "Activities along the lines of communications indicate that the North Korean forces building up sufficient bases and supplies to support offensive operations in the area of the Han River and are increasing their antiaircraft positions in the Seoul area."

The South Korean army, although chewed and mauled by the Communist invasion that began unexpectedly June 25, was credited by MacArthur with still holding Suwon and its airstrip; Inchon, Seoul's port town 20 miles to the west, and a line north of Suwon. South Koreans also held unspecified positions south of the Kimpo airfield, 16 miles west of Seoul.

MacArthur also reported South Korean reinforcements were moving north in an attempt to contain the invader threat east of Suwon.

"Transportation of munitions, materiel, supplies and troops from points in Japan to Korea continued unmolested through the day (Monday) MacArthur announced.

British and American warships maintained patrols along both coasts of Korea without incident.

American advanced headquarters officers said there was only sporadic ground fighting Monday without appreciable result.

American pilots reported most Communist columns and supply convoys appeared to be lying low during daylight to avoid the intensifying American and Australian strafing.

As an example that the northerners were having difficulties, one of the Communist columns that moved east of Suwon used oxen to pull some of its guns.

No Change During Night

A U. S. headquarters spokesman at Taejon, 73 miles south of Suwon, said there was "no change any time last night" on the front except for minor alterations in defense lines.

The spokesman confirmed to Lambert that Suwon and its air field still were in South Korean hands. A flanking threat to Suwon from the east by a Red column did not develop.

The spokesman said the Northerners still had an undetermined number of armored units south of the Han River, but they have been relatively inactive since crossing the stream Sunday night.

This was an apparent reference to two tank-led columns that were reported Monday in a position west of Seoul threatening to Suwon. Later reports indicated this threat was not so serious as first indicated.

U. S. Reported 'Shocked' by Egypt's Stand

Cairo, Egypt, July 3 (AP).—An Egyptian source tonight said the United States Government has told Egypt it was "shocked" by this country's abstention from voting on the United Nations Security Council resolution to aid South Korea.

In the Security Council session last Tuesday, seven members supported a United States resolution calling for military aid for South Korea. Yugoslavia voted against the resolution. Egypt and India asked to withhold their decisions pending instructions from their governments. Later India announced support of the resolution, but Egypt decided to abstain.

United States Embassy sources said earlier today that Ambassador Jefferson Caffery had discussed the Korean issue for an hour with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Salan Eddin Bey. They did not give details.

The Egyptian informant said the United States State Department's views were relayed privately to Salan Eddin Bey by Caffery. The informant gave this account:

Caffery read to the foreign minister a cable from Washington saying the United States had expected cordial relations between the two countries would have led to Egypt's support of the Council resolution.

The State Department expressed regret that Egypt considers the Korean incident a purely local affair and fails to take into account its possible development into a world conflict. The American cable said Egypt's present attitude "would not encourage us to help Egypt if the occasion arises on other matters."

The informant said the State Department would have preferred a clear-cut attitude, "even a vote against the resolution," rather than this country's present abstention.

Salan Eddin Bey was said to have replied that Egypt made her decision to protect what she considers her interests, asserting that Egyptian neutrality would be a factor against the spreading of the Korean fighting.

U. S. Rushes Marines, B-29s, And Carrier Forces to Korea

it is believed that about 60 will go—tripling the four-engine-bomber strength operating against the North Korean Communists.

There was no official word of Navy reinforcements in Korean waters, but Navy circles said it was certain that the newly formed "Task Force Yoke," now preparing to leave West Coast bases, will go to the Far East and not just to Hawaii as originally announced.

The new task force is built around the Essex-type aircraft carrier Philippine Sea, and includes two cruisers, the Helena and Toledo, nine destroyers and a number of auxiliaries.

There also were hints that the major units of the Seventh Fleet—particularly the carrier Valley Forge and its 90 warplanes—would soon take a more active role in the campaign.

To date, the whereabouts of the Valley Forge has not been disclosed, other than that she was in "Formosan-Korean waters," and a Navy spokesman said the first word of carrier plane strikes against Korean targets probably would not come until the task force broke radio silence sometime after such an operation.

What disposition will be made of the Marines when they arrive in the Far East will be up to General MacArthur. They could be sent directly to Korea on the converted destroyer-type transports they will embark in and move by rail to the front; they might be held in Japan as replacements for Army troops already committed; or they could be called upon to perform their specialty and open a beachhead in territory held by the Communists.

Used in the latter way they would constitute a potent weapon in MacArthur's hands. While much of the South Korean coast is rugged, there is a stretch north of Inchon on the west coast and several points in North Korea that are reasonably favorable for amphibious operations. A landing behind the enemy lines of even regimental combat team size could have a vital effect on a campaign such as now is under way. And the threat of it would require dispersion of Communist forces along the coast.

The dispatch of Air Force bomber reinforcements and expected commitment of carrier aircraft to the battle are significant developments.

If at all possible, the American high command wants a reasonable quick victory in Korea, without involving too many Army troops. Originally it was hoped that air power, aided by a naval blockade, could choke off the Communist supply lines and not require large American ground forces.

The collapse of large sections of the South Korean Army caused us to send in the Twenty-fourth Division from Japan. Then it became apparent that the Far Eastern Air Force could not do the job expected in knocking out North Korean air bases, ammunition dumps, troop concentrations, railroads and bridges.

Wing to a combination of circumstances, MacArthur's airmen have not even been able to keep the Communists from rebuilding bridges across the Han River, now reported to be sizable stream as a result of recent rains. Yesterday's communique reported 105 air sorties July 3, with no assessment of damage, apparently because of weather.

Shooting Stars Lack Range

Eighty of these were made by F-80 Shooting Stars, and Air Force officials admit they are far from ideal for the job. The speedy jet fighters can just barely reach the battlefront from their bases in Japan and have only about 10 or 15 minutes before they return. This is only enough for a couple of passes and—without forward air controllers on the ground to direct them on targets—they cannot do too much. Targets in North Korea largely are out of range.

Reports of continuing activity by the North Korean air force indicate that the American fliers have not yet achieved air supremacy. In fact, a USAF spokesman said yesterday that not more than 18 of the enemy's 100 to 150-plane aerial force have been destroyed. They consist of Russian-built Yak 3s, 7-Bs and 9-S and IL-10s. All four are piston-engined craft rated inferior to our F-51s.

News dispatches from Japan yesterday reported that air depots were working around the clock seven days a week remodeling older-type auxiliary fuel tanks for F-80s and other craft. Some 3000 of the droppable wing-tip tanks are being enlarged to twice their original size.

Carrier Planes to Fight

What will be done about the fighter situation is not yet clear. Almost certainly the Navy carrier planes will be thrown into action. The Leatherneck fliers of Marine Air Wings One heading for the Orient are specialists in the close support of grounds troops. They have F4U Corsairs, and probably AD attack planes—which, though of limited range, can operate from short fields in Korea much better than the F-80s—and also jet F9F Panthers, it is believed.

One answer might be to move the jet fighters to Korea, but this is a tremendous logistical undertaking, requiring tons of fuel, bombs and beans, ground and air protection, warning and GCA radar, etc.

There are some F-51s, with a radius of action of about 1000 miles, in Japan, recently discarded by the fighter groups when the F-80s arrived. There are also some piston-engined National Guard F-47s in Hawaii and jet F-84s in the United States with a radius of action of about the same distance as the F-51.

Transfer of two more groups of B-29s to Japan, however, should make a great difference in the entire air situation in Korea. If there is any break at all in the weather—described as worse than is usually the case during the rainy season—they should pour many tons of bombs daily on the enemy.

The Twenty-second Bomb Group is headed by Lieut. Col. John Grable, jr., and has about 45 B-29s. The Ninety-second Group, which has 30 bombers, is headed by Col. Claude E. Putnam, jr.

More Fighters to Alaska

In another development yesterday, the Air Force sent 12 F-80s from Burbank, Calif., to Anchorage, Alaska, to bolster the fighter forces of that outpost.

One major fact that only now becomes apparent—and was strongly hinted at during yesterday's press briefings—is that General Stratemeyer's Far Eastern Air Force never was equipped for such a job as that given it last week.

When the Air Force was reduced to 48 groups, "FEAF" was cut to a size so that the only mission it properly could be charged with was air defense of the American-occupied teritory. It was suggested that this is apparent in the wording of their formal mission—a classified document.

Nor does Stratemeyer apparently feel he may safely divert any sizable portion of his 400 fighters from this air defense job in the Philippines, Okinawa, Guam and Japan for operations over Korea, as yesterday's sortie total suggests.

The same is true of Navy carrier forces and Marine troops and planes. During the past couple of years, the number of attack carriers has been slashed from 13 to 7 under the defense economy program. Only three are in the Pacific. Marine air squadrons were cut from 23 to 16 and then scheduled for a further reduction to 12. The Marine Corps' two divisions were whittled down to 11 battalions and orders were issued to cut them to six.

11 Battalions Kept

Adm. Forrest Sherman, chief of operations, however, managed to get approval for keeping 11 battalions and 12 squadrons by squeezing the money for them out of other forces, just as he earlier boosted the carrier strength from 6 to 7.

The cutback in Marine strength is one reason a whole Marine division is not heading for the Far East. Only five or six battalions are included in the division, and a like number with the Second Division on the East Coast or afloat in the Mediterranean. Normally there are nine infantry battalions to a division.

Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine, who led a division at Iwo Jima, commands the First Marine Division. Commander of the First Air Wing is Maj. Gen. Field Harris, another veteran of Pacific fighting. It was not revealed whether they would lead the units going to the Far East.

There was considerable discussion of mobilizing additional forces to meet the situation yesterday, but apparently there has been no decision as yet in this direction. If the Korean campaign goes on for some time, replacements of men and weapons must be provided. Additional divisions and air groups may have to be created and warships pulled out of mothballs.

But top policy makers are reluctant to call for even a partial mobilization if the fire in Korea can be put out without it. Mobilization might appear to Russia to be preparation for a global war and the United States would hardly gain prestige if such action were necessary to whip North Korea.

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson told reporters after a conference with President Truman there is no prospect of a partial mobilization "at the present time."

Korean Action Stressed on Air As United Nations Operation

propaganda has pretended, but is an international action under the authority of the Security Council.

The U. N. broadcasts go out from New York by short wave, but they are also relayed by powerful American and British transmitters in Tokyo and Singapore.

Meanwhile officials here were making new plans to counteract Communist propaganda that is trying to convince the world that the United States and its "puppets" in South Korea really started the shooting for their own cynical purposes.

Communist transmitters in China and the European satellite countries are stepping up their attacks on American "aggression" and "illegality" in Korea. Moscow's own broadcasts to foreign countries have been building up a more generalized picture of Anglo-American "imperialists" plotting a new world war.

And Moscow broadcasts to the Soviet people have stressed, in contrast, the "peacefulness" of Soviet policy at home and abroad.

The American counter-attack against this story has been hampered by the refusal of the administration here, or of the United Nations itself, to blame the Soviet Union in any way for the Communist invasion of South Korea.

Accordingly, officials were considering yesterday whether to name Russia directly in Voice of America broadcasts, even though the United States has been careful in formal official statements never to name the Soviet Union as the instigator of the North Korean attack.

Unless the wraps are taken off American official broadcasters soon, some in the Government believe, the fiction of the peace-minded Soviet Union will gain ground in Europe and Asia and the reasons for the U. N. action will be twisted or brushed aside.

Carrier Midway, Destroyers to Go To Mediterranean

The Navy yesterday announced it would send the 45,000-ton aircraft carrier Midway and four destroyers to join the United States Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean.

It said the five ships will leave Norfolk, Va., about July 10.

The announcement said it was normal procedure to augment overseas fleets about the time relief ships went out and station vessels were preparing to return.

But the announcement said nothing about the return of the 27,000-ton carrier Leyte and 13 other vessels now in the Mediterranean. The destroyers to accompany the Midway are the F. T. Berry, Keppler, Norris and McCaffey.

British Aid Limited to Naval Power

London, July 3 (AP).—Government officials today said it is Britain's wish at present to limit her contribution to the Korean operation to naval support.

The informants said Britain is unlikely to send troops or aircraft unless the United States asks for them. They said Britain has made this clear to the U. S.

Britain's present defense commitments in the Far East, they said, already are straining her army and her treasury. Her feeling is that her ground and air forces are contributing substantially to Western power security by holding the Malayan and Hongkong fronts.

These commitments, informants said, have aroused criticism of Britain's international policies in Commons. There are sgns the government will meet some opposition from its own supporters Wednesday in the Korean debate.

Two Laborites have offered a motion that calls for the withdrawal of her naval forces around Korea. They are likely to be supported by a handful of their party colleagues. Another motion calls on Britain to try to influence the United States and other countries to recognize the Chinese Communist regime and thus secure the admission of Red China, and the return of Russia, to the United Nations.

Many British officials are afraid the involvement of the Royal Navy in the Korean operations will lead the Peiping government to break off talks with this country aimed at establishing full-scale diplomatic relations.

The informants gave this outline of the British position after the cabinet discussed the latest report on the Korean situation received from General MacArthur's headquarters.

British Diplomat and Aide, Who Stayed in Seoul, Missing

London, July 3 (AP).—The fate of a British diplomat and his aide who stayed behind in captured Seoul last week is worrying the Foreign Office.

A spokesman today said no word has been heard from them since the South Korean capital fell to North Korean Communists. Normally contact between London and Seoul is maintained by radio.

The diplomat is Capt. Vyvyan Holt, British Minister to South Korea. His aide is G. Blake. Holt was given the choice of staying at his post or getting out. He elected to stay and send two other members of his staff southward. They have since arrived in Japan.

Malaya's Own Reds Held Country's No. 1 Problem

Kuala Lumpur, Malay States, July 3 (AP).—Field Marshal Sir William Slim, chief of the British Imperial General Staff, today said the campaign against Communist attacks in Malaya is more important to Malaya than the situation in Korea.

Slim told a news conference there is no question of sending troops from Singapore to Korea. He would not comment when asked if the British forces in Malaya would be strenghtened.

More 'Arms Rattling' Ahead, Yugoslav Says

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 3 (AP).—Yugoslavia was warned by an army spokesman today to beware of a new series of "arms rattling" incidents along the Soviet-led Cominform borders.

Lieut. Col. Ljubo Andjelic, writing in the newspaper Politika, said the propaganda campaigns approaching the proportions of the so-called August crisis of last year.

Andjelic said the attacks were designed to "hide aggressive pressure against this country and to inflame nationalistic passions and hate against this country."

The writer declared the Cominform press was issuing false reports about the size of the Yugoslav army and claiming that military forces here are being trained along American and British lines.

Rivers Asks 24-Hour Deadline on A-Bomb

Representative Rivers (D., S. C.) yesterday proposed that President Truman tell North Korea that unless it ceases aggression in 24 hours atomic bombs will be used against strategic military installations.

Rivers, a member of the House Armed Services Committee and a frequent critic of Mr. Truman, said he was wholeheartedly backing the President in his action concerning Korea.

Rivers telegraphed Mr. Truman that "untold American casualties" may result if American troops are caught in Asia during the monsoon season.

"Since North Korea has resorted to force," Rivers added, "you will be more than justified in using superior force to terminate this war."

U. S. Amply Supplied With Food and Fiber

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

No country was ever better prepared for an emergency from the standpoint of food and fiber than the United States is today.

One who knows, Dr. Byron T. Shaw, deputy administrator of the Agricultural Research Administration, told The Washington Post yesterday that American farms could, if necessary, feed and clothe twice as many people as it is feeding and clothing today.

Dr. Shaw tempered his statement with the warning that agriculture is still subject to the hazards of nature—that bad weather is an ever-present danger and that plagues of blight and insects are a constant threat.

Dr. Shaw also warned that agriculture, more than at any time in history, is vulnerable to attack by outside, human enemies. Here are some of the dangers of war that Dr. Shaw stressed:

1. An enemy could knock us for a loop by introducing some types of insects by air—something that can fly and start broods.

2. "A plane loaded with cottonseed filled with the pink boll weevil could cause almost unlimited damage to our cotton crop."

3. "It would be fairly easy to scatter germs of the foot-and-mouth disease—the most deadly infectious disease known to animals—by air. We know how difficult it is to control it normally.

4. Another fearful animal scourge—the rinderpest of Asia and Africa—could be spread by air.

"During World War II, the Oriental fruit fly was introduced into Hawaii by our troopships, Dr. Shaw said. It has ruined the fresh-fruit exports, including the enormous pineapple trade, for the islands, and for a while stoped valuable shipments of orchids.

The Government is spending half a milion dollars a year in research in the Hawaii plague, he said. Among experiments under way are some that deal with parasites that kill the fly.

When Dr. Shaw was asked, however, to what extent this country in turn was prepared for such warfare, he smiled and commented: "That's a question I'm not permitted to answer."

The greatest increase in agricultural production, Dr. Shaw asserted, could come in the South. During the last war, the farms of the country expanded production 35 percent. A similar increase could be accomplished—not this year, for the crops are already planted, but next year.

A further increase would mean giving up some food that we like for types we would have to take. That would mean more potatoes and grain and less meats and dairy products. It would involve shifts in diets, and regimentation of both production and consumption, he believes, but twice as many could be kept healthy and able to work as are fed by us now.

Dr. Shaw's optimistic forecast of what could be done, and his warnings against what modern warfare could bring, were outlined at a two-session meeting of the top Agriculture staff recently.

"The last war did a lot to increase agricultural production," he said. "The price incentive and the patriotic appeal got many farmers acquainted with agricultural science for the first time. When they saw that some of the theories of the scientists paid off, they were more willing to have their help."

One of the greatest aids will be the development of grasslands, particularly in the South. It will release a lot of grain for human consumption. Grasses that can fatten livestock to rival grain-fattened animals are being grown. Even turkeys and other poultry thrive on some of the new types of pasturage.

First Decision Due Soon

One of the first decisions based on recent world events that the Agriculture Department must make will come before July 15. By that date Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan must determine the wheat program for next year. Planting begins in some sections in September—in others in October. The decision must state whether acreage should be increased.

Hog production is about 20 per- of the last war. Cattle numbers cent higher than at the beginning are only about 10 percent higher. Sheep and lambs are down about 40 percent. Poultry is about 15 percent greater in numbers, and milk production up about 5 percent.

Stocks of cotton are about 40 percent below the tremendous supplies we had in 1941, but grains are in greater supply.

Building Booms To New Record in Southern States

Baltimore, July 3 (AP).—Construction work boomed to a post-war peak in the first six months of 1950 below the Mason-Dixon line.

The Manufacturers Record today reported $1,782,682,000 worth of building contracts were awarded in that period in the 16-State area. This was 25 percent above the comparable period of 1949.

Building of new homes accounted for a large chunk of the increase, with activity in that field up 90 percent at $475,535,000, the trade publication said. The value of contracts let in June, $422,139,000, was a 25 percent jump above May and a 51 percent above June of 1949.

Private building accounted for $618,324,000 worth of contracts let in the Southern States in the first six months of the year. That was 40 percent above the first half of 1949. Highway work was up 39 percent at $292,797,000.

Nehru Sends Pledge of Cooperation

New Delhi, India, July 3. (U.P.)—Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru today pledged India's cooperation with the United States "for world peace and prosperity."

In an Indian National Day message, which coincides with American Independence Day, Nehru told United States Secretary of State Dean Acheson:

"My visit to your great country last year strengthened my belief that, in cooperation with other liberty-loving nations, the United States of America can make a mighty contribution to world peace and prosperity."

Earlier, Foreign Office officials indicated India has told the United Nations it cannot give military aid to South Korea. A spokesman pointed out that India's armed forces are small and scattered throughout Kashmir, Hyderabad and Communist-infested areas here.

Nehru also warned an unofficial Parkistani trade delegation that as long as the fighting in Korea continues, both India and Pakistan are "on threshold of war."

6 Western European Nations Seen Agreed on Schuman Plan

Paris, July 3 (AP).—Schuman Plan talks were resumed today and reliable sources said the six Western European nations were agreed on broad outlines of the proposal for a supranational authority to merge their coal and steel production.

The French plan, named for French Foreign Minister Schuman, includes a federal Parliament, chosen from the national Parliaments of the nations joining the pool, to supervise operations of the authority.

The informants who sat in on today's session said all delegations expressed general approval of the proposal, though in some cases there were reservations as to details. The informants did not elaborate.

The delegates from France, Western Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg last met a week ago. Since then the delegates have been at home discussing the outline with their governments.

A communique after the session said the talks will continue as details of the French plan are taken up one by one.

Schuman Plan Attacked By Reds in 7 Nations

Berlin, July 3 (AP).—The Communist parties of seven western European countries tonight served notice that they will fight to foil the Schuman Plan as a "plan of enslavement and war."

In a joint statement published by the Soviet-licensed news agency ADN, the Communist leaders of France, Western Germany, Italy, Great Britain, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg denounced the Schuman Plan as an "Important stage in the preparation of war against the Soviet Union and the countries of the people's democracy."

8 of Air Force Dead, Missing In Korea Area

The Army added five names to its Korean casualty list yesterday for an officially reported total of 16 missing from one air crash.

At the same time the Air Force put out its first formal casualty list, with eight names of men killed or missing in Korean combat flying.

Whether any of the airmen were among the five crewmen of the crashed C-54 was not indicated. The Air Force previously had reported all five dead, without giving names. Field reports had said 23 were aboard and there were no survivors.

The AF report showed two men as killed June 30—First Lieut. Revier L. Harding and Staff Sergt. William J. Goodwin.

Harding's death had been reported previously in the press. His mother, Mrs. Azel Harding, lives at Fort Worth, Tex. His wife is in Japan.

Goodwin was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Neal C. Goodwin, Rural Route, Tacoma, Wash.

The others on the Air Force list were reported killed or missing while participating in flights in the Korean operation. They are:

Second Lieut. Charles Avarella, son of Joseph Avarella, of Buffalo, N. Y.

First Lieut. Vernon A. Lindvig, son of Martin Lindvig, Lakota, N. Dak.

Staff Sergt. Maurice Olson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl P. Olson, Minneapolis, Minn.

First Lieut. Darrel B. Sayre, son of Mrs. Doris E. Sayre, Route 2, Racine, Ohio.

The casualty list for the transport crash rose by one in an afternoon report listing Sergt. Boyd W. Elam as missing. He is the son of Mrs. Flossie E. Elam, Jackson, Tenn.

Earlier in the day the Army had announced four of the names.

The first list, out Sunday, reported 11 missing in the crash of another transport on the way from Japan to Korea.

Yesterday's list:

Pfc. Stanley A. Gogoj, son of Anthony Gogoj, Philadelphia.

Pfc. Edward Peska, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peska, Warrensville, Ohio.

Corpl. Ernest J. Pitre, son of Mrs. Eulgert B. Copp, Jeanerette, La.

Corpl. Elmer E. Hardy, son of Walter Hardy, Route 1, Lucasville, Ohio.

There was no detail in either Sunday's report or yesterday's.

Zenjan is a city of about 60,000 population in an area that has been suffering from a serious famine because of poor crops.

U. S. Appeals Fail to End Rail Strike

Chicago, July 3 (U.P.).—Both sides in the strike against five railroads stood pat today against Government appeals and warnings to end the 8-day-old walkout quickly because of the Korean war.

Two members of the Senate Labor Committee, Chairman Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) and Senator Wayne R. Morse (R., Oreg.) warned the lines and striking switchmen to avoid "impulsive" legislation by settling their dispute quickly.

President Arthur Glover of the striking AFL Switchmen's Union replied that he would meet with the railroads or Federal mediators "at any time," but he charged neither was making a real effort to reach a settlement.

The switchmen had rejected an appeal by the National Railway Mediation Board to end the strike in view of the Korean situation. They offered to send enough men back to work to move "essential material."

A railroad spokesman called the union offer "utterly impractical" and said it was "impossible to try to run half a railroad."

Spokesmen for the five railroads said they were standing on their offer to settle the dispute on terms recommended by a presidential fact-finding board.

The board proposed cutting the work week to 40 hours and reducing pay by one-sixth, making up for the reduction with an 18-cent hourly raise.

Laundry Mark Ace, Adam Yulch, Dead

Hempstead, N. Y., July 3 (AP).—The man who codified half a Nation's laundry marks as an aid in tracing criminals died last night as the result of a fall.

He was 65-year-old Adam Yulch, a captain in the Nassau County police department, whose master files on the clothing marks were the envy of the FBI and the New York City police department.

Yulch had been on duty at Woodmere, N. Y., during a volunteer firemen's tournament two weeks ago. A police motorcycle whizzed past him and Yulch back, falling on a sidewalk and breaking his pelvis. He died last night from complications.

Chiang Says U. N. Should Blame Soviet

Taipei, Formosa, July 3 (AP).—Chinese Nationalist Leader Chiang Kai-shek tonight said the United States should charge Soviet Russia with instigating the Korean war and ask her to halt further North Korean attacks on the southern republic.

Addressing a meeting of his government's officials, Chiang appealed to the United Nations to consolidate Asiatic peoples in their struggle against communism and prevent them from being utilized by the Russians as tools of aggression.

He spoke shortly after other Nationalist sources said they were disappointed in Washington's rejection of Nationalist offers to send combat troops to aid in the fight to halt Communist North Korea's invasion of the South Korea Republic.

Chiang also appealed to non-Communist nations to put Asiatic nations on an equal footing with Europe in their anti-Communist efforts. He said the democracies should "abandon their past policy of concentrating all their attention on Europe and neglecting Asia."

"Asia with half the world's population will be a decisive factor in the future struggle between the democracies and the Communist aggressors," Chiang asserted.

The Nationalist leader said it was the tactics of "Soviet imperialists" to get puppet regimes in various satellite countries to fight democracies while the Russians remained in the background, thmeselves sending no soldiers nor openly engaging in the fight.

Chiang charged that "various acts of aggression committed by Soviet Russia through its puppets against the peoples of Asia have been overlooked or neglected in the United Nations."

"It was for this reason that the United Nations and democratic powers have practically lost the confidence of the peoples of all Asia," Chiang added.

The Nationalists were said to have picked three of their fighting divisions for dispatch to the Korean front before Washington voiced objection. It was thought in some quarters that Washington feared Nationalist participation in the fighting might precipitate the entry of Chinese Communist troops on the North Korean side.

Chiang discussed with his aides the American note rejecting Nationalist assistance, and may already have sent a reply to Washington.

Chinese Red Armies Set, Reports Say

Hongkong, July 3 (AP)—Chinese Communists are mobilizing their armies for participation in the Korea campaign within the next 40 days," independent Chinese newspapers reported today.

At the same time, the Communists tried to whip up public opinion against America's "armed invasion of the territory of China." This referred to the United States' announced intention to defend Nationalist Formosa.

Canton, China, and Portuguese Macao dispatches to independent newspapers said 26,000 Communist troops already are bound by rail from South China to join North Korean forces. Other units have been alerted.

One paper said more than 20,000 troops between Canton and Macao were ordered to arrive at the "Manchurian front" within 40 days and prepare "for any unforseen development."

Another dispatch from Canton reported 6000 troops of the Reds' 137th division had been rushed by rail to Hankow, 500 miles north, to await further orders.

Chinese Red Army Had 120,000 Koreans

Tokyo, July 3 (U.P.)—Japanese who fought in the Chinese Communist army today said it included a battle-tried force of 120,000 Koreans who, under Mao Tze-tung, routed the Nationalists from Manchuria.

These Japanese, who escaped from the Reds and made their way back here, said there were two Korean armies with the Chinese, both with legendary reputations for reckless fighting and savagery.

One, of about 50,000 men, took part in the capture of Changchun in April, 1946, and in the battles of Kirin and Harbin, and fought all through central Manchuria. The other is the Rhee Kung Kan army of 70,000 men. The Japanese believed this one is providing the punch for the North Korean push south.

Dr. Atsuyoshi Yoshia, 70, who served three years as a medical officer with the Chinese Communists before he escaped, said these Korean soldiers were trained to toughness in rough frontier life and were responsible for the massacre of several thousand Japanese at Tunghua, near the Manchurian-Korean border, in February, 1946.

Wounded, Refugees Picture Misery of War

A Railroad Station, South Korea, July 3 (U.P.).—Take a walk through this railroad station to look at the war that is never mentioned in the communiques.

The wounded, blood oozing through their bandages; the refugees with hungry, squalling babies; the rifle troops standing sternly at attention for predeparture inspection.

There are prisoners here, too, miserable wretches, squatting with bowed heads. Their life expectancy is not great.

The wounded are quiet in the straw-littered boxcars, waiting for someone to move them to a hospital. But for some, the pain and the broiling sun is too much. They roll their heads back and forth, mouths open, moaning in agony.

Pleading Eyes

A corpsman explains in halting English just how they were hit: This one in the leg with a shell splinter; this one through the belly with a bullet; the one in the corner, with his head swathed in bloody bandages, caught a grenade.

Some of the wounded watch the American newsmen scribble their notes with quiet dignity; others watch with pleading eyes. Some hobble barefoot to the car door and are helped outside to urinate.

Water is passed around in a common can. It is hot, probably laden with germs. But it is wet and it is nectar to fevered lips.

Their clothes and uniforms have become stiff from days of body sweat and mud and, lately, blood. Most of the blood is clotted and old, but occasionally it oozes through padded cotton bandages, as on the head of the wounded man in the corner where it drips from his stove-in head. He stares ahead and apparently does not care what happens.

Sweat Everywhere

Some of the wounded lean out the door for half-ripe tomatoes offered by a vendor to go with their dry rations. Sweat is everywhere. Some comes from the bakeoven heat in the boxcar; some from the pain of throbbing wounds.

In contrast to the pitiful wounded is the group of South Korean soldiers lolling at dress parade on the platform, waiting for a train to the front. Suddenly a non-com bawls an order. They spring to attention while a junior officer passes up and down their ranks inspecting their shiny rifles and equipment.

The wounded watch them, too, many of them with sneers. It is the knowing contempt that the great fraternity of wounded always holds for the healthy. The non com bawls again and the squad relaxes. The inspection is over.

Prisoners' Heads Bowed

On the far platform, guards hover over a group of squatting prisoners, their heads bowed like Moslems at prayer. Loops of heavy twine link their wrists and they sit motionless, never daring to raise their close-cropped heads.

Their thirst, their cramped condition and discomfort is of no concern to anyone, for they are the enemy. A whistling train rolls up to the platform, overflowing with civilians, refugees from the front.

Like all refugees of all wars, they own only what they have on their backs and what they can carry. Their lives are intact, but their homes are gone, their years of labor lost. They have nothing but hope.

Korea's Kimpo Recalled as Midget Field

Harry Brown, make-up man in The Washington Post composing room, yesterday recalled Kimpo airfield in invaded South Korea as looking five years ago "like a midget airport."

Brown

Brown, who lives at 719 Nicholson ave. nw., was at Kimpo in August and September 1945 with the 1878th Engineers, 24th Army.

"The airfield was surrounded by small mountains," he said, "and the ground was so lumpy, spongy, that when you rode down a road the car went up and down. Even planes went up and down as they crossed the runway."

Brown remembers only one main runway at the airfield, now in Communist hands.

"It was big enough for C-47s and C-46s, but not big enough for B-26s or B-29s," he said "The field was surrounded by a gutter, and a B-26 going down the runway would hit the gutter and nose over."

The runways could probably be extended, however, he said.

When Brown's outfit arrived, Kimpo Airfield showed no trace of war damage. The administration building and hangars were standing and there were no holes in the runways.

"I imagine the concrete was not very thick," he said, "and one good bomb or two would knock the field off."

The Koreans, a friendly people, cheered the arrival of the Americans and brought chickens and eggs as gifts, but sanitary conditions were repellant, Brown concluded.

Fourth of July Holiday Death Toll Hits 514

By The Associated Press

At least 514 persons were killed in accidents up to Monday night in the four-day Fourth of July holiday. And there still is a day to go.

The rate was one accidental death every 10 minutes.

Traffic accidents accounted for 336 deaths; 109 died in drownings; one was a fireworks victim, and 68 deaths were from miscellaneous causes.

It appeared that the traffic toll would top the National Safety Council's prediction that traffic mishaps would account for 385 lives during the period. Homeward-bound motorists are expected to pack the highways this afternoon and tonight.

Federal Deficit Runs 40% Under Estimate

The Government finished fiscal 1950 on June 30 with a deficit of $3,122,102,357.45, the Treasury reported yesterday.

That was about $2,300,000,000 or 40 percent, less red ink than anticipated in an Administration estimate made only last April 20.

The Government went in the hole for the year—for the 18th time in the last 20 years—by spending $40,166,835,914.82 while taking in only $37,044,733,557.37.

The Federal debt stood at $257,376,855,385.01 at the year's end last Friday. The Treasury had $5,517,087,691.65 in cash on hand at the time.

Billion Higher Than in 1949

Despite the bright showing against Administration estimates, the deficit was about $1,311,000,000 greater than that recorded for the previous year.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said the main reason was a $1,201,000,000 decline in revenues in 1950 as compared with 1949. That reflected the "recession" in the early part of fiscal 1950, which began July 1, 1949.

Compared with the official budget estimates last January, however, spending during the year just closed was down sharply—to $40,167,000,000 in round numbers, against an estimate of $43,297,000,000.

Revenue receipts, mostly taxes, were more than 700 million dollars below the January estimate of $37,763,000,000.

A big cause for the smaller-than-expected spending was national defense, where outlays lagged more than one billion dollars below the January estimate.

Defense outlays actually totaled only $13,496,000,000, with the major items being $3,506,000,000 for the Air Force, $5,704,000,000 for the Army and $4,125,000,000 for the Navy.

In January, defense outlays had been estimated at $14,526,000,000. Major items were $3,745,000,000 for the Air Force, $6,151,000,000 for the Army and $4,413,000,000 for the Navy.

Foreign Arms Cost Less

The foreign arms program cost only 44 million dollars against a January projection of 160 million dollars.

Many of the apparent "savings" actually reflected a lag in spending on affected programs which could be expected to be caught up during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, swelling total costs and pushing up a deficit for that period which the administration's last estimate has placed at $5,200,000,000.

One of the programs to cost more than estimated was the farm crop support program. The Commodity Credit Corporation spent $1,713,000,000 on that compared with its $1,556,000,000 budget allowance. The Postoffice Department went in the hole 593 million dollers against an expected 568 million dollars. The Labor Department cost 258 million dollars—40 million dollars more than expected.

Underspending of estimates, however, was more widespread and frequently represented a greater dollar gap against the estimates.

The Atomic Energy Commission, for example, spent only 524 million dollars of its 673 million dollars allowance. The Electrification Administration disbursed 293 million dollars of its 362 million dollars allowance.

RFC Also Runs Under

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation spent only five hundred eighty million dollars of its one billion, thirty-four million dollars allowance.

The Marshall Plan cost was only $3,523,000,000, compared with its $3,895,000,000 allowance.

Veterans aid costs totaled $6,044,000,000 against a budgeted $6,255,000,000.

On the income side, receipts from withholding tax collections totaled $10,073,000,000, well above the $9,839,000,000 January estimate. An improved employment situation was largely responsible.

On the other hand, income tax collections from corporations and from individuals paying outside the withholding system amounted to only $18,189,000,000 against an expected $19,307,000,000.

Not counted in the budget figures were $2,106,000,000 collected in Social Security employment taxes and paid into the Social Security fund. These receipts were below the $2,245,000,000 the Administration had expected.

Customs collections eclipsed expectations, rising to 423 million dollars against a 375-million-dollar estimate. Increased imports were responsible.

Boy, 2, Drowned In Can Holding 6 Inches of Water

Woodbine, Md., July 3 (AP).—A 2-year-old child tumbled into a 10-gallon paint can holding 6 inches of water and drowned yesterday.

Little Milton (Mickey) Jenkins, jr., greeted his father when he drove up, then scampered around to the back of the house.

The youngster wasn't seen for a while, so his father and grandfather went around to look for him. They found him, face down, in the big can.

Mount Airy firemen tried artificial respiration, but the boy was dead.

GIs Fired On By Australians have a conventional engine.)

The wounded American was on a road in the United States sector, but the attack itself was not directed at American positions.

There were five to seven of the planes — Mustangs with the Australian white dot in blue circle marking on their wings—in the savage strafing and rocket attack which sent the GIs diving for cover.

(There was no immediate official mention of the attack near the American advanced ground position. It presumably was a mistaken pinpoint of a target by Australian fliers. A Tokyo air headquarters spokesman said he could not determine what happened until all of Monday's air strike reports were in and assayed.)

There were no American fighter planes in sight as the attackers dropped out of a blue sky, giving the newly-arrived American soldiers their first close experience with gunfire in the Korean war.

The planes dropped like falcons on a town in which the Americans have a command post. The GIs had been digging in positions around the town.

As the Mustangs swooped in, Roy McCartney of the British Reuters News Agency and I dived for a river bank and snuggled up under the bank's overhang.

Machine-gun bullets cut a symmetrical pattern of little fountains in the river. Rockets wooshed to great muddy explosions beside one of the two bridges between which we were crouching.

The planes hacked away at the town with machine guns, lazily circled and came back on rocket runs. They destroyed some of the town's rail facilities.

As the first rocket let go with a hiss, one GI, his face pressed to the earth, muttered, "Judas, everyone is getting up on these modern techniques."

Most of the Americans had never been under fire before, but they reacted well and hit the dirt like veterans.

And like veterans they did not start firing their rifles at the planes, as the South Koreans do, endangering everyone in the vicinity.

The name of the wounded sergeant was withheld pending notification of kin. His wound, a bullet through a toe of the right foot, was not serious. When he was brought into an aid station at the command post he grinned, despite the pain, and yelled:

"Anyone got any letters they want me to take home?"

The planes followed their rocket attack with another strafing sweep, their machine guns chattering away. They started great fires in a small shop area.

Ammunition Train Struck

Mustangs, strafed and rocketed the ammunition train at 3:40 p. m., setting aflame cars carrying sorely needed 105-millimeter ammunition. For hours molten fragments showered the town (which cannot be named for security reasons), surrounding roads and paddy fields.

During their successful strike, the four planes also destroyed the South Korean red brick artillery school and a truck pool.

Sergt. William Schwellinger, Oklahoma City, Okla., had a clear view from his foxhole.

"The planes were Mustangs," Schwellinger said. "They came in at 500 feet and I saw the Red, white and blue circles (the insignia of Australia) as plain as day."

Coming north along the Taejon-Suwon road shortly after the raid, I saw about 50 trucks heading south carrying South Korean wounded. The walking wounded with bloody bandages picked their way past smouldering trucks.

When I reached the town, the ammunition train was in full eruption. Shell fragments screamed overhead, then plopped into flooded rice paddies a half-mile or more from the explosion. The railroad station was in flames.

Individual bursts were visible for four miles. Thick smoke clouds hung over the town, though which I drove to American positions further north.

Pfc. Alvin Cinhinigo, Brooklyn, was driving a jeep 20 miles south of Suwon when two jets, which he believed were American, started to strafe.

"They came a second time, but I guess they recognized us that time because they waggled their wings and took off," Cinhinigo said. He was not hurt.

Attlee Faces Party Revolt Over Korea

London, July 3 (U.P.)—Prime Minister Clement Attlee today was faced with the possibility that rebels in his own Labor Party may force a vote of confidence in the House of Commons over Korea.

Political sources said the dissidents, most of them left-wingers, were challenging the legality of the United Nations decision to impose military sanctions on North Korea. They contended the U. N. decision was invalid because Russia, as a permanent member of the Council, did not vote for it. This is the same argument used by the Soviet Union and Communist states elsewhere.

Attlee and his cabinet affirmed their policy at a meeting at No. 10 Downing st. today. The Prime Minister now will attempt to quiet his critics at a party caucus Wednesday before the debate in the House on Korea.

Even if the "back-benchers" force a vote on government policy, Attlee is assured of victory because Conservatives and Liberals already have pledged their support. But it would be embarrassing for the Labor government to be put to a test by its own members.

Disputes Hit Building Boom

No. 201, reinforced concrete workers—could not be reached yesterday for comment.

An AFL Building Trades Council spokesman denied that the agreement being sought with Beauchamp "is illegal. He maintained the agreement is a valid one, which has been signed by many contractors" here.

For the past 18 months, contractors and subcontractors in this area have been organizing into the Construction Contractors Council in a movement of unity to deal with management-labor problems. The AFL Building Trades Council holds the view that the CCC is not truly representative of management, and therefore cannot represent management in bargaining.

Both disputes broke out several weeks ago on the construction project at 10501 Georgia ave., Silver Springs, where Beauchamp has been building a school for St. John's Catholic Church of Forest Glen.

During one point in the construction activity, aluminum-framed windows had to be installed. The work was assigned to the AFL carpenters. The structural ironworkers protested, claiming the work was customarily performed by them, and threatened to picket, according to Beauchamp.

The Construction Contractors' Council suggested that a three-man board of employers be named to determine which union should get the aluminum-frame window installation work. The committee decided the work should be assigned to the ironworkers.

Beauchamp then put the ironworkers on the job, and the carpenters protested. The carpenters appealed for relief to the National Joint Board for the Settlement of Jurisdictional Dispute, set up by the nation's construction industry management and unions two years ago. Dr. John T. Dunlop, neutral chairman of the board, suggested that the disputed work be assigned to the first union—that is, the carpenters—until the board could resolve the controversy.

Whereupon, the window job was reassigned to the carpenters.

This time the structural ironworkers got mad and—according to Beauchamp — informed that builder that no more ironworkers of any kind would be available on any Beauchamp project because the men were needed on other jobs. That was around June 15.

At about the same time, the AFL Building Trades Council called on Beauchamp to sign an agreement under which the company agreed to hire AFL workers exclusively, and to sublet his work only to subcontractors having union agreements.

Beauchamp rejected the request and told the AFL council that the Construction Contractors' Council was his bargaining agent, and that the matter should be taken up with it. Beauchamp also charged that the agreement illegally called for a closed shop.

Last Thursday noon a delegation from the AFL Building Trade Council paid a visit to Beauchamp construction jobs, and established picket lines on five jobs with signs declaring the company to be unfair to the council. Immediately, members of unions affiliated with the council walked off the job.

A spokesman for the AFL Building Trades Council said that at no time did the council ask any of the ALF workers to quit the Beauchamp project. "We simply made use of our right to free speech and voiced our opinion on picket signs," the spokesman said. "The workers, being good union men, walked off the jobs on their own initiative".

'Aggession,' Gomyko Says

breadth of the Soviet Union today.

Pravda, the Communist Party organ, devoted its front page to reports of the rallies and "the enormous indignation" of the Soviet people. But its entire second page was given over to Soviet peace efforts.

Greater emphasis was given the peace movement than previously, conveying the impression, to the average reader, that the forces of peace are strong and will prevent the outbreak of a third World War.

"We are peaceful people, but if anyone touches us we will show them what we can do," a prize-winning metal worker and member of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) told one meeting. "Let Truman and Acheson consider Hitler's fate."

It is noteworthy that speakers and editorials are now more frequently using the phrase, "American and English warmongers," instead of "Anglo-American warmongers."

Most speakers repeated the accusation that the United States instigated the invasion of north Korea and demanded "immediate cessation of the military intervention of the American aggressors."

D. C. Deposits Up 49 Million In Six Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Combined deposits of Washington's 19 banks increased $49,051,912 in the first six months this year.

Aggregate on June 30 was $1,086,880,097 as compared with $1,037,828,185 on December 31, 1949. The banks reported their deposits in anticipation of a midyear call for condition by the Comptroller of Currency. The call is expected some time this week.

Biggest part of the half-year upturn was scored in the first four months when deposits rose nearly 31 million. Since April 24 (last call date), deposits advanced $18,651,746.

Outstanding gainer for the first six months was National Bank of Washington whose deposits soared to $87,566,340 on June 30 from $60,924,651 on December 31, 1949. The 43 per cent increase during the first half has placed the institution in fourth place among leading local banks. This is the bank whose stock control was purchased last year by the United Mine Workers.

Other sharp increases were scored by Riggs National, up 4 million; Union Trust, up $2.4 million; American Security & Trust, up $2.3 million; Washington Loan & Trust, up $2.2 million; National Savings & Trust, up $2 million; Lincoln National, up $1.7 million, and McLachlen Banking, up $1.6 million.

Here are the deposit totals for the last six calls for condition:

April 24, 1950	$1,068,228,251
Dec. 31, 1949	1,037,828,185
Nov. 1, 1949	1,005,460,914
June 30, 1949	990,996,485
April 11, 1949	1,022,130,959
Dec. 31, 1948	1,020,265,787

POSSIBLE PROP: Yesterday was the first time that New York State trustees were allowed to exercise their new right to invest as much as 35 percent of their funds in common stocks. There was no evidence that trustees were in any hurry to get into the market. The long-range effect of trustee purchases of common stocks is expected to be considerable and possibly one of the market's strongest supports. It is estimated that there are $13.5 billion in trust funds of all types in New York State.

RECOMMENDED: For those seeking facts on economic and business cycles in Metropolitan Washington, a new pamphlet study has been issued by the University of Maryland's bureau of business and economic research. Official figures are detailed and charted for such major barometers as building permits, population, trade and service establishments, per capita income, bank debits, store sales, newspaper advertising linage, employment and utility sales. The booklet is entitled "Metropolitan Washington After 150 Years: Its Economic Expansion."

ODD LOTS: Holiday shutdowns will cause steel operations to fall to 92.6 percent this week after a record of 11 successive weeks at 100 percent or more above capacity . . . The St. Joseph Paper Co. and the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad will lock horns here before the ICC at a hearing July 11 on proposals to reorganize the bankrupt Florida East Coast Railway . . . Esso Standard Oil Co. will advance price of its heavy fuel oils Wednesday by 10 cents a barrel.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Hugh M. Gillespie will retire July 15 as vice president, secretary-treasurer and director of the American Export Lines . . . F. L. Meacham has been named general works manager of the Crosley and American Central divisions of Avco Manufacturing Corp . . . Irvin L. Clymer has been appointed president of Pittsburgh Limestone Corp. to succeed Arthur W. Worthington, retired . . . William A. Meiter has been named central sales manager of Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp

TREND: Earnings of the electric power companies increased approximately 16 percent in the initial quarter of 1950. Factors were a 7 percent advance in revenues and a drop in the operating ration to 76.7 percent of gross, from 77.9 percent in the comparable quarter of 1949. Indications are that the upward trend of earnings will be extended over the foreseeable future, according to Standard & Poor's Corp.

New York Cotton

New York, July 3 (AP).—Cotton futures were firm in moderately active dealings today and closed $1.60 a bale higher to 15 cents lower. Only nearby July futures, which are in process of liquidation, displayed an easy tone.

The Korean war news, a larger than expected increase in the mid-June cotton parity and new RCA cotton purchase credits stimulated commission house demand for futures.

Gains extended to $2 a bale in early dealings, although part of the advance was later lost on profit taking and hedging.

Traders thought that the more extensive war operations in Korea could mean a larger military demand for cotton goods.

Sane Fourth

Whenever large numbers of people take to the highways, there is almost bound to be an increase in automobile accidents. Thus it is reasonable to expect that, despite warnings to drive safely, several score Americans will lose their lives in traffic crashes over the Fourth of July holiday. The dangers in crowded highways ought to be stressed, but they hardly warrant the grisly death "roundups" that have become a sort of ritual for the press associations on the morning after a holiday. As a matter of fact, as the Baltimore Sun suggested recently, there is little reason to believe that more persons are killed on holidays than on other summer weekends. American Automobile Association figures bear out this theory. Some 180 persons are killed over the country in the course of a normal two-day weekend; the number would be doubled for a four-day holiday. Actually, 347 persons were killed in auto accidents over Memorial Day weekend; the AAA is predicting 385 for the current holiday.

These statistics are ugly enough, and they certainly do not give license to anyone to drive as if his were the only car on the road. But we suggest that normal care, rather than gloomy trepidation, is the right formula over the holiday. Meanwhile, some of the attention usually given Fourth of July auto accidents might well be focused on the sale of fireworks, which, with all their possibilities for maiming children and adults, are still available to all takers across the line in Virginia.

Illegality Over Korea

At present there is little concern over the legality of President Truman's order sending American armed forces into action in Korea. The vast majority of people of both major parties agree with former President Hoover's comment: "When the United States draws the sword, there is only one course for our people." From the long-range view, however, the legal aspects of the President's action are very important, and any attempt to confuse the public mind on the issue is a grave disservice.

Senator Taft stands foremost among those who have challenged the legality of the President's action. But the narrow point that the Senator raised seems to have been generally misunderstood. In his speech to the Senate last week he approved the general policies outlined in the President's statement. He said that our troops in Korea must be given unstinted support, and he would have voted to authorize use of American forces if the question had been submitted to Congress. The Senator also conceded that when the American representative on the Security Council has voted in favor of using armed forces the President has authority to order American troops into action without going to Congress. What he complained about is that the President acted outside the authority conferred upon him by Congress to enter into an agreement with the Security Council on the commitment of American forces for U. N. police duties.

Now let us examine this objection. Under the statute in question agreement with the Council was to be subject to congressional approval. However, because of Russian objections, no such agreement has ever been made, so there was no congressional approval; consequently, the act could not be invoked. It is as simple as that. The President, faced with this situation, had to fall back upon his powers as Commander in Chief and his authority to see that the laws are enforced, and here his position is unassailable, for the U. N. Charter, having been adopted as a treaty, is law of the land.

Congress, to be sure, retains the power to declare war, but it is generally recognized —in practice no less than in word—that police action to halt aggression is not war, as American history testifies. Before the Charter was adopted the question of whether the President could respond to a Security Council call for military force without waiting for Congress to act was widely discussed. The consensus was that any President conscious of his responsibilities to the Nation would act in such circumstances to uphold the Charter, leaving to Congress only the question of whether general war for this purpose should be authorized, if necessary. On this point the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations is our guide:

> . . . the committee is convinced that any reservation to the Charter, or any subsequent congressional limitation designed to provide, for example, that employment of the armed forces of the United States to be made available to the Security Council under special agreements referred to in Article 43 could be authorized only after the Congress had passed on each individual case would clearly violate the spirit of one of the most important provisions of the Charter. One of the fundamental purposes of the Charter is to provide forces which will be immediately available to the Security Council to take action to prevent a breach of the peace.

It is thus not necessary to indorse the far-fetched claim of Majority Leader Lucas that the President has a right to intervene if he believes that the spread of communism affects in any way the safety and security of the United States or its possessions. He had the obligation to intervene under treaty. To be sure, the President has a historic duty of repelling attacks that may be regarded as against the United States and of protecting the lives and property of American citizens beyond our own borders. When military action is taken for other purposes, however, it ought to be tied directly to U. N. policy. The prompt use of force in Korea appears to have met this test. We cannot agree with Senator Taft that the sterile U. N. Implementation Act had closed the door to presidential orders that the U. N. treaty be enforced. The President did not violate the Implementation Act. He merely recognized that it was inapplicable. If the President has a right to enforce the treaty with whatever forces are at his disposal, as we think he does, that right is not nullified by an act of Congres prescribing one way in which it may be implemented.

Independence Day

This year we have good reason for drawing close to the spirit of '76. The "inalienable" rights of "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" have been secured. That is occasion for rejoicing. But the world has shrunk so rapidly since these immortal words were written that the entire country realizes that those rights are now under challenge in faraway Korea. It is upon the general security that the enjoyment of our "inalienable" rights now rests.

So the United States, as the greatest power on earth, has been given the role as defender of the general peace. Forty nations have endowed the United States with the prime responsibility for seeing that the cease fire and withdrawal notice to the North Koreans is obeyed. It is a great vote of confidence in the American power. It puts this country, on the 174th birthday of its own Declaration of Independence, in the status of first among equals. With this role there go great responsibilities upon which reflection is particularly appropriate on this day of national festival.

The supreme responsibility is, of course, that the United Nations shall be obeyed, and obeyed quickly. The fire that has broken out in Korea could easily spread into a great conflagration across the entire world if it isn't damped out without delay. To put it out means to use all our resources with speed and energy. It has been said that Korea is a strategic liability. But failure, or even a protracted period of conflict, cannot be envisaged; it might be the prelude to catastrophe. If there is any nervousness about a conclusive closing with the aggressor in any one spot where we have chosen to close with him, we shall be beaten everywhere in this struggle for general peace. To make thine adversary beware of thee is a Shakespearean injunction which is very much to the point in the conflict in Korea. This, we are sure, is the aim of the President and the man in charge of the fire-fighters, General MacArthur.

Equally important as an American responsibility in this testing time is a demonstration of respect for what the Declaration called "the opinion of mankind." It is a simple proposition of aggression that made 40 nations commit themselves in Korea. But the issue may not be altogether simple to the Koreans themselves or to all their Asiatic neighbors. It is thus of signal importance to the United Nations to explain the stakes in Korea to the people of all lands, including Korea itself. This is being done, it is said, in a continuous and all-embracing campaign conducted from Lake Success.

America's part in the propaganda battle is just as vital a military component of the police action. Neglect no means is a military maxim. The invaders must be told that all means will be used, even if this requires the employment of the atomic bomb, to throw them back. It might be that one of these early days a refractory foe will have to be given a time-limit in which to obey the United Nations. For it will be impossible to contain the patience of the people of this country with the present diplomatic fiction that North Korea is the real aggressor if the police action is prolonged. That patience is already beginning to wear thin, it seems to us, in the face of the anti-American slanders out of the Kremlin.

Our Swollen Suburbs

We have previously expressed the view that the District should congratulate itself on the census returns. It is difficult to understand the disappointment which is said to prevail because the District added only 129,000 inhabitants to its population in 10 years and because the other 355,000 persons who have settled in this area during that decade have gone to the suburbs. To us this means only that, population-wise, the city is growing in a sensible fashion. It is taking advantage of the wide open spaces that, fortunately, surround the metropolitan area in every direction. We only hope that Washingtonians will have the good judgment to perpetuate this trend—to demand an environment in which they have ample room, light and air instead of piling up in vertical layers in a small space.

What the census returns do emphasize, however, is the necessity of better integration of the city's now extensive suburbs with its central area. The 1,452,242 inhabitants of Greater Washington are divided among six different political units, but in many respects these units constitute a single city. A vast number of people travel from the suburbs to the downtown area every day. They have a common interest in highways, bridges, bus service and so forth. The fact that some workers in the Virginia suburbs are paying as much as 70 cents to get to and from their jobs in the District each day demonstrates the acute need for some sort of joint control over transit rates. Highway planning to serve the needs of the larger city is also a problem of the greatest importance.

Some months ago the Interfederation Council took up this problem and Congressman Sasscer of Maryland introduced a bill providing for a commission to study how best the needed integration of community services could be undertaken. Nothing has come of it. The bill has not even come out of committee and the hope for its emergence at this session now seems nil. But both Congress and the community ought to realize that the mushroom growth of the suburbs has enhanced the necessity of action in this sphere. While it is fortunate that Washington is spreading out over a wide area, steps must be taken toward unified control over common municipal services if chaos is to be avoided.

Where The Aid Went

Senators Ferguson and Knowland are to be commended for not pushing their investigation of "delays" in military aid to Korea while the conflict is in progress. At the same time their anticipatory comment that people will be "shocked" by the disclosures is in itself disruptive, and could be justified only if the Senators had their teeth into something substantial. We doubt that they have. The "shock" doubtless derives from the Government notion of priorities and responsibilities. These were different from the Senators' view that it was a mistake to give western Europe priority in arms aid and to limit aid to Korea to the provision of internal security. They will use the breakthrough as an argument against an objective judgment of primary interests sustained out of the supplies of a Nation dedicated to limit liabilities and the maintenance of a nonmilitary economy. Well, let us hear it later on.

However, it is well at this time to nail the inaccuracy that no arms have been given Korea. When American troops withdrew from South Korea a little more than a year ago, they left behind them divisional arms and equipment valued at from 55 to 60 million dollars. This certainly was a good start for a force trained to maintain internal security and put down small border incidents. As for subsequent aid, some 27½ million dollars was provided in the 1950 military assistance program to cover Korea, Iran and the Philippines (16 million dollars more for Korea and the Philippines is contained in the 1951 bill just passed). However, the military agreement with Korea was not concluded until January of this year. The delays have not been unusual in view of the time required for rehabilitating equipment. Indeed, it is questionable whether more small arms aid, even if it had been delivered, would have been of much help against Communist tanks and planes.

Not long ago President Rhee, who is now blaming the United States for insufficient aid, was boasting about the prowess of his army—a boast concurred in by American military advisers. These served merely to muddy the water. It was never intended to attempt to build up the Korean forces to withstand a major invasion, if for no other reason than that in a war Korea is a strategic liability. This theory may seem wrong in light of the subsequent American military involvement, but it was perfectly consistent with expert judgment on the overall American responsibiliity.

If there is a fault here, it may lie in the failure to act on what intelligence was available and anticipate what was coming. However, the State Department need not apologize for placing major emphasis on western Europe or for diverting "general area of China" funds to southeast Asia, where the need seemed greatest. MAP was conceived as a program to stabilize western Europe. To imply through hindsight that some sort of scandal was involved in the priorities is equivalent to saying that the United States should send as much armament to Timbuctu as it sends, for example, to France.

Veteran Preference

Dr. Arthur Flemming, former civil service commissioner, suggests that all veterans should be required to attain at least a passing grade on civil service examinations before appointment to Federal jobs. Under the existing system giving additional credits to veterans, men whose grades are from 5 to 10 points below the passing rate of 70 are put on the eligible list. While the preferential treatment accorded veterans is a departure from the merit system of appointment that lowers the efficiency of the Government establishments, the resultant impairment of standards is not particularly serious, provided veteran jobholders meet the minimum requirements for eligibility applicable to other Federal jobholders. When they fail to reach passing grade, however, they are obviously unfit appointees, and for their own sakes as well as in the interest of the public as the chief beneficiary of the merit system of appointment, they should be prevented from entering the Government service.

INITIATION

Tonight there is a whispering under the eaves:
An eloquent silence, for no other ears
Perceive it yet, not having ventured far
Beyond familiar ways.
I am the privileged one; for me this quietude
Is broken without violence, not suddenly,
Yet surely, solemnly, as if
These voices had discoursed forever there,
With none to hear, and none to pay them heed.
Now I may listen, not perceiving yet
The import of their muted eloquence.
But in a stranger night than this, a thing
Will ultimately come to pass, whereby
I shall achieve new knowledge: I shall know
Whereof they speak, and why. And I shall be
No longer foreign to this mystery.

RALPH FRIEDRICH.

Security Council

The decision of the United Nations Security Council to interpret the Charter (Articles 27 and 28) so that it can take firm decisions and act in the absence of a big five power has interesting implications.

Article 27 (3) on voting may have been interpreted to mean ". . . the concurring votes of the permanent members (present) . . ." Moreover, if the qualification ". . . in decisions under Chapter VI and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting" foresees the possibility of firm decisions without the concurring votes of all the permanent members, this might well be considered a precedent for the recent decisions taken on the United States resolutions for "cease fire" in Korea and aid against the aggressor under Articles 39 and 42.

It would be reasonable to assume that if parties to a dispute were not to be permitted to veto decisions under Chapter VI (the pacific settlement of disputes), they were equally prohibited from vetoing decisions under Chapter VII (concerning action with respect to threats to the peace, breaches of the peace and acts of aggression) unless expressly permitted. It is unfortunate that that logical deduction was not clearly stated in the drafting. However, such gaps can be closed by interpretation when the need arises as we have seen.

One possible implication of the recent interpretation is that with that precedent the Security Council could vote to recommend to admit the states to membership that the USSR has blackballed. Another possible result is that the USSR, seeing that absence no longer equals veto, may stop violating Article 28 (1) ("The Security Council shall be so organized as to be able to function continuously. Each member of the Security Council shall for this purpose be represented at all times at the seat of the Organization.") and return to the U. N. councils and committees to exercise its veto in person.

That, of course, may raise new legal problems as to the ability of the Security Council to function properly in emergencies. It should bring to a head the whole question of the veto and may do more to clarify the issue and strengthen the U. N. than many months of less-than-crisis-pressure conferences. The Charter and the organization have shown vitality when the members exhibit the will to make it work.

Asian Neutrality

It is a mistake to assume that the strong policy the United States has adopted in the Far East will deter the march of communism in Asia. It might block the temporary victory of the North Koreans, but it will generate among the Asiatics false hopes and expectations, if they happen to be among those who want to keep the status quo, and among the nationalist and democratic elements, resentment and cynicism that, if continued, might drive them to the Communist camp.

Hanson Baldwin in the New York Times on June 27, said: "Internal weakness rather than external assault—the perennial 'secret weapon' of communism—is the chief danger to the Republic of Korea in the Soviet-sponsored civil war that now rends that country."

Walter Lippmann, The Washington Post, June 29, says: "Yet, unless our position in the Asiatic Far East can be held in large measure by the will and native force of Asiatic peoples, ever larger bodies of American troops will become frozen there." Is the will of the Asiatics expressed by leaders such as Bao Dai, Syngman Rhee, Chiang Kai-shek or the Arab governments which the Western powers intend to supply with arms to maintain "internal stability"? Are we supposed to believe that the maintenance of the status quo in these areas is the criterion for peace?

Asiatic countries must declare themselves neutral in order to allow the true democratic forces to build the real bulwark against communism and reaction at home, and avoid international chaos. Reliance on reactionary and corrupt governments is a fallacy which cannot be alleviated by money and arms. The regeneration of Asia into a genuine Third Force movement is the answer to modern imperialism in all its shades and pretenses.

Bethesda Parade

Well, we had a parade in Bethesda July 1. How glad I was to see the boys in uniform, marching down the avenue instead of among the hills of Korea. And the bands, and the bandolettes—the girls with the twirling batons!

Yes, I liked it; liked it because I've been thoroughly inoculated with the military band virus. But if you're going to keep people standing in the sun (there was one casualty for the rescue squad that I saw), why stop the parade to hear speeches? But if you do, why not provide loudspeakers so people can hear?

I stood within a hundred feet of the reviewing stand and all I heard was Governor Lane saying, "We all realize." What he or we realized I haven't found out yet. BETHESDAN.

AAU Meet

The 1950 AAU track and field meet is history. All that remains is the stock taking so as to determine what really happened to cause the top foot racing carnival of 1950 to be practically a flop. Less than 5000 attended the two day meet at College Park. The sponsors, the Sesquicentennial Commission, are out of the pocket up to $10,000, in spite of the fact that the AAU meet is the World Series of the cinder sport.

The 1950 meet did have many handicaps to overcome from the start. Byrd Stadium is rather uncomfortable at any time. The running track is good but too narrow. Seven or eight lane tracks are imperative. Byrd Stadium can accommodate only five lanes in the hurdle events and crowd on six in the running events which require lanes. The AAU meet comes at the end of a long wearing season, yet the number of contestants on hand last week end was great, perhaps too great, though many good men passed up the meet.

I dare say that many years may pass before the AAU is invited back to Washington. Whether the meet is staged here or elsewhere I suggest that the following things be done: The meet has to have well planned, honest, and extended publicity. If it could be arranged, the meet should be staged nearer to the first of June. The meet should be staged in a big comfortable stadium with adequate track. (Maryland's new stadium would certainly meet these requirements.) Some plan of limiting the number of contestants should be hit upon. Only men of proven ability should be allowed to compete.

I would also recommend that all current high school track squad members living within traveling distance of the meet be admitted free and be provided with good reserved seats. Most city boys and many small town boys see big league baseball. Few boys anywhere see big league track. Present day high school boys must furnish the stars and spectators for future AAU meets.

Reactions On Korea

I wish to commend the President for his forthright action in the Korean outrage. Every American interested in the future of his country should stand behind the President 100 percent.

We are in the midst of the most baleful struggle the world has ever known. the struggle between communism and individualism. Everything that is good in Western civilization is the result of individual freedom and individual enterprise. There is no middle ground, no compromise.

Communism is a deadly jungle beast that seeks to destroy all the good that now exists in the world. This jungle beast knows but one law, the law of force. There is no temporizing with it. It cannot be stopped by trying to read the Sermon on the Mount to it.

No sane American wants to see this country enter another world war but if one is necessary to preserve American individualism and world freedom, the American people are prepared in spirit to do so.

Meantime, we should keep prepared to the limit. This country needs universal military service, the best material for land, sea and air war and the most thorough and complete scientific research that will enable us successfully to carry on what will be the greatest of all wars, when and if it occurs.

HENRY P. FRY.

I wish to congratulate the President on his correct and courageous stand in connection with the Korean affair. Some will say that he was bold and high-handed, but, on the other hand, the majority will say that Mr. Truman used sound democratic judgment.

At last Mr. Truman has demonstrated the fact that he is a strong leader, one with brains and backbone. Because of the positive action of the President in handling the Korean situation, a third world war will be averted.

Mr. Truman may not know it, but he has made himself a hero among all democratic peoples of the world.

In 1945 the same President authorized the use of the A-bomb to save the lives of American boys, and end the war with Japan. Yet, all branches of the Government have studiously avoided mention thereof in Northern Korea. Uncle Joe can and in all probability will slip his stooges one or several.

Let's end it quickly or give them a few hours to stop all firing. ALFRED A. MAYS.

Ward Politics And The Atom

By Marquis Childs

Pike's Struggle

THE EXTENT to which we are all in the dark on so many of the major decisions that directly determine our destiny is well illustrated in the dispute over the nomination of Sumner Pike to a new term on the Atomic Energy Commission. On the surface it looks like just another shabby election year squabble.

Iowa's Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper lined up Senate members of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee to produce an adverse vote of 5 to 4 against Pike. The vote on the Senate floor is also expected to be against Pike since Hickenlooper is reported to have had success in rounding up Southern Democrats to vote with the Republicans.

Except in the most general terms, Hickenlooper has not said why he opposes Pike's reappointment. It was Hickenlooper who brought the charges of "incredible mismanagement" against former commission Chairman David Lilienthal.

Those charges were never proved. What was generally considered a time-wasting fiasco brought Hickenlooper a lot of criticism in his own State. The best guess is that by blocking Pike he will show the folks back home that he did, after all, accomplish something.

On the Meet the Press radio program, Hickenlooper, after much prodding, indicated one reason for his opposition to Pike was because Pike had been against proceeding with the steps necessary to make the hydrogen bomb. Reached at his home in Maine, Pike denied that he had opposed President Truman's H-bomb decision.

BUT THERE are other aspects of this whole business that strike much deeper. A year ago Pike made a speech at his college, Bowdoin, in Maine. In that speech Pike touched briefly on what is the heart of the relationship between the commission and the Congress—that is to say, the relationship between the atomic giant and the people.

He said that the Joint Senate-House Committee did not know either the production rate or the number of the bombs in the atomic stockpile. Then Pike added:

"The recent charges against the commission's chairman, and the hearings which followed, based as they have been on comparatively peripheral and insignificant items in the program, seem to me to have had their source in a basic inability to make a sound appraisal of the relative importance of the various elements which constitute the commission's task."

The fact is that the committee still does not know either the rate of production or the bombs in the stockpile. Whenever the subject has come up in a committee meeting, a majority have indicated that they did not want to know.

As Pike suggested in his talk at Bowdoin, this implies a basic distrust of their own capacity, either to keep the secret or to know what to do about the information if they had it. I might add that, it seems to me to indicate a basic distrust of the processes of representative government in the face of a power so overwhelming as atomic energy.

THE PRESIDENT knows the number of bombs in the stockpile. So do the commission members. So do the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Chairman Brien McMahon of the Senate-House committee personally knows.

In February of 1949, in a talk in Detroit, McMahon said that perhaps the time had come to consider whether or not the figure should be made public. First, it would put Russia on notice as to how very far advanced this country was, and, second, it would reassure Americans on the progress being made by the commission. President Truman curtly refused to consider the possibility of publicity.

Pike in his Bowdoin address also talked about the "clumsy handicaps" imposed on the development of atomic power for peacetime purposes. Since his resignation, Lilienthal wrote an article for Collier's warning that present secrecy regulations were throttling experimental development of atomic power.

There is another element in the Pike blockade. Colorado's two Senators, Eugene Millikin, a Republican, and Edwin Johnson, a Democrat, both voted against Pike. They are said to be influenced by the dissatisfaction of uranium miners in Colorado with the commission's policies. Johnson's chief function in the Senate has always been to do the work of the mining and other interests back home. And he does it with the amiable shrewdness of a ward politician.

Bernard M. Baruch, in his memorable declaration to the United Nations, spoke of the issue of atomic energy as being for all of us a choice between the quick and the dead. That this should be decided on the level of ward politics, with the responsible committee unwilling to examine the basic facts, is a sad commentary on the times.

Kuhn's Article

As a long-time Republican I wish to nominate for special consideration Ferdinand Kuhn's article of July 2 entitled "Truman Cleared Air for Befogged Western World."

The reporting of this situation is in the same fine tradition of the President's courageous action. The article also clears the air. Specifically it shows a period of 10 days in history which may hold the destiny of the world for a long period of time.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Stalin Thus Far

NAZISM and Soviet communism are so much alike in so many ways that it is an effort to realize that Stalin is not Hitler all over again. One immense difference between them is that Stalin's campaigns to expand come after Hitler's. They are designed to take over the countries which Hitler and his Japanese confederates ruined. Thus Stalin's problem is different from Hitler's and, even if there were no difference in their doctrines, Stalin's actual policy would not be a duplicate of Hitler's.

Lippmann

MOREOVER, we must remember that though Hitler failed disastrously in the end he was at one time not too far from success. Stalin is certain to have studied Hitler's successes in order to copy them and his mistakes in order not to repeat them. For this reason alone, though there are others as well, we cannot hope to do well if we act on the stereotype that in Stalinism we are confronted with a revival of Hitlerism, and that the old ideas, plans, policies, and slogans will do.

In the USSR we have met a great expanding power which is governed by the same men who governed it during the rise and fall of Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo. These men cannot have failed to learn much of what the Germans had to teach in the military arts, and much also of what to avoid in the diplomatic and strategical management of a campaign to expand and to dominate.

STALIN since 1944, like the Axis dictators before 1931, has been carrying out a great plan of expansion. But Stalin, unlike Hitler and the others, has—thus far—waged his cold war without advancing the Soviet forces beyond the lines fixed by international agreement at Yalta and Potsdam.

Hitler and company were never able to expand without committing their own forces. The Japanese army went into Manchuria in 1931; the Japanese were unable to find Chinese who were willing and able to bring Manchuria within the Japanese orbit. In all of Mussolini's and Hitler's aggressions up to the outbreak of the Second World War itself they had, in addition to the fifth columns, to engage their own forces from the beginning. In Ethiopia, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Albania, there were involved directly and openly German or Italian forces.

Even in the Spanish Civil War, where there was a thin fiction of "nonintervention," Italian troops and some German units, fought in their uniforms and were recognized in official Italian reports as "expeditionary forces."

THAT precisely is where—thus far—Stalin has not followed the pattern of the 1930s. Hitler, Mussolini, and Tojo expanded by a series of German or Italian or Japanese acts of overt military aggression. Stalin has been expanding his empire without committing his own Soviet forces to any overt act of military aggression. He is practicing a much subtler, a more profitable, and a much more prudent tactic—which is to foment and to exploit civil war and colonial war but not to engage himself.

In the turbulence of the Far East the Soviet Union has made the greatest gains. Yet alone among the five great powers of the United Nations, it has not since 1945 been involved in any actual fighting in eastern Asia. The British, the French, the Chinese of course, and now the Americans, have fought. But not the Russians, not Stalin's own forces. Yet the Western nations have all but been ousted from eastern Asia, and they are threatened with the loss of all effective influence in the Far East.

THIS IS indeed a devilishly ingenious version of the ancient art of building an empire: to divide in order to rule, using satellite troops to conquer while the imperial troops, because they are uncommitted locally, act as a force in being in the balance of the world. Hitler never had the brains, even if his neuroses had permitted him, to contrive a strategy of this subtlety and of such magnitude.

The Korean affair, which should be and probably can be localized, will compel us to consider far more seriously and thoroughly than we ever have as yet what we can do and how we can do it. The problem posed by Korea is how this country can exert influence on behalf of the independence and the national freedom of nations which lie beyond the natural limits of our power—which is dominant sea power, great air power, but in quantity at least is very meager indeed as power on the ground.

IN PRINCIPLE the answer must be the one we have been looking for—by improvisation—since the North Korean attack. Inside Asia we can act only within the framework of the universal society—by the consent of its leading and especially its most disinterested members, and with their intellectual as well as their moral guidance. The Truman Doctrine, were it allowed to stand as an American commitment to defend by armed force South Korea and all the places like South Korea, would be a most dangerous military entanglement and an increasing political liability. But subordinate to and liquidated into the United Nations, as in the past 10 days, its good purposes could be separated from its rhetorical excesses. Then by the common wisdom and the concerted influence of many nations it may become possible to do in some measure what we, acting alone and in effect unilaterally, have so tragically failed to do in China and in South Korea.

tending the concept of the welfare state entirely too far."

The fantastic possibility that RFC may have to lend more of the taxpayers' money to protect the first investment if another gambling casino becomes more successful climaxed the hearing. The rival places are run by brothers, who, Fulbright noted, are known to get along well together and have a record extending from Michigan to Florida.

Sees Banks Bailed Out

Boss gambler at the Mapes Hotel, where RFC placed the taxpayers' money, is Lou Wertheimer, a former big-time operator in Michigan. Boss gambler at the Riverside Hotel, which is now enlarging its casino, is Mert Wertheimer.

Fullbright and Douglas charged that the loan, $975,000, in effect "bailed out" the First National Bank of Reno and the Bank of America, which had provided interim financing for the hotel's construction.

Douglas, so indignant he frequently rose from his chair and walked about the committee bench, hotly disputed Hise's contention that profits from the gaming tables were only "incidental" to the hotel's operation. Hise insisted RFC was dealing with the Mapes family, the Mapes Hotel and the Reno bank, and not with the casino, which was under lease to the gamblers. Lou Wertheimer was reported asserting he did not even know there was such a loan.

Douglas insisted, however, that 98 percent of the revenue of the hotel came from the casino. Again and again Fulbright tried to get an answer to his question whether or not the loan was justified on the ground of sound public policy.

Four Disapprovals Noted

Robertson testified the Reno bank originally was to receive $240,000 of the loan and the Bank of America about $960,000, but the loan was reduced. It had been disapproved by a San Francisco review committee, the San Francisco Advisory Committee, a San Francisco examiner and the Washington Review Committee. But it was recommended by Robertson and approved by a 3-to-2 vote of the RFC Board of Directors.

Fulbrght, former president of the University of Arkansas, said it is a serious matter to involve public money "with characters of this kind."

He said one of the associates of Wertheimer in the hotel casino, Bernard Einstoss, was in "more or less" constant communication with Mickey Cohen, Los Angeles gambler.

Einstoss, known as Moony Einstoss, was arrested some years ago in connection with bribing a jockey, Fulbright said.

RFC Director Harvey J. Gunderson declared RFC is not supposed to check on the character of persons who lease properties from the corporation's borrowers. Robertson said the president of the Reno Bank recommended Wertheimer, Einstoss and their colleagues for the casino lease.

The subcommittee also questioned RFC officials on loans of $175,000 to Ryan Industries, Detroit, and $882,000 to Roytheon Manufacturing Co. of Newton, Mass. Douglas declared it was "incredible" that private financing was not available to Roytheon. He asked what had happened to the "business judgment" of Boston bankers.

Phone Workers Accept Pay Rise

Richmond, Va., July 3 (AP).—Union employes of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. have voted overwhelmingly to accept a company offer that would mean raises of $1 to $11 a week for about 70 percent of them, a union spokesman said today.

Officials of Division 33, Communications Workers of America, said the C&P has been notified of the vote. The company had given the workers until July 2 to accept or reject the offer, which was made retroactive to June 25.

The new contract sets up new wage terms, shortening the long apprenticeship periods for some 70 percent of the approximately 5000 workers included in the bargaining unit.

$58 Million Spent For Land in Israel

Chicago, July 3 (AP).—The Zionist Organization of America was informed today that the Jewish National Fund has spent more than 58 million dollars in buying land in Israel in the last year.

Dr. Harris J. Levine, fund president, gave his report to the fifty-third annual convention of ZOA.

In the last year, he said, 625,925 dunams (a dunam is one-fourth acre) had been bought and 150 new villages founded. That is nearly as much land as had been accumulated in the preceding 30 years, Dr. Levine added.

Hot Oklahoma Primary Ends At Polls Today

By The Associated Press

A slam-bang primary battle for a U. S. Senate seat will be put up to Oklahoma Democrats today in the Nation's only Independence Day election.

On-the-scene political observers are looking for a close count between 73-year-old Senator Elmer Thomas and 48-year-old Representative Mike Monroney for the Democratic senatorial nomination. There are five other entries and if no one gets a majority, there will be a run-off July 25.

National attention is focused on the Oklahoma election partly because it's a holiday affair and partly because of the vigor of the campaigning.

Thomas, who has served in the Senate since 1927 and is chairman of its Agriculture Committee, created a stir last year by complaining that Sweden had snubbed visiting Senators. Monroney, who has served six terms in the House, won a national award for his part in winning passage of the Congressional Reorganization Act.

Thomas and Monroney have sharply questioned each other's attitude on farm questions, and the issue of public vs. private power has been a warm one. Monroney forces have accused Thomas of blocking some of the Government's rural electrification projects, whereas Thomas says he is one of the original REA backers.

There are some signs that the Truman Administration would prefer Monroney over Thomas, but both are regarded as followers of President Truman on major issues.

Scientists Ask That Congress End AEC Crisis

NYHA News Service

The Federation of American Scientists called on Congress and the Administration yesterday to act quickly to end "the crisis for the Atomic Energy Commission precipitated by failure of the Senate Atomic Energy Committee to report favorably the nomination of Sumner Pike" to a new four-year term on the agency.

The still unexplained action of the Senate members of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee in voting, 5 to 4, Thursday against the nomination of Pike, the only veteran and only Republican member of the commssion, has cut the five-man agency temporarily to three active members.

Pike has been acting chairman since the resignation of David E. Lilienthal on February 15—a vacancy that the President has not yet filled.

Senator Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), Democratic floor leader, has scheduled the Pike nomination report for Senate consideration Wednesday.

Hickenlooper, Bricker Ask Immediate Action

By The Associated Press

Two Republican Senators yesterday demanded that President Truman name a new permanent chairman for the Atomic Energy Commission at once.

They were Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) and Bricker (R., Ohio).

Hickenlooper, ranking Republican member of the Senate Atomic Energy Committee, said a Commission chairman should have been named "long ago".

Bricker, also a member of the committee, said the job requires top-flight talent.

'Progressive' GOP Indorsed by 21 in House

Twenty-one Republican House members yesterday indorsed as "a brilliant document" a statement of principles by a group of party members calling themselves "The Republican Advance."

The statement, issued Saturday at Philadelphia, called in general for the pressing of a progressive program and elimination of "purely negative opposition" to proposals of the Truman Administration.

The 21 Republican representatives, from 12 states, disclosed they fully indorsed the fundamental principles of the declaration. They said in a statement:

"While some of us might disagree on some detail in the wording of the document, we nevertheless feel that it outlines in powerful language not only the background bases upon which in the Republican Party came to power, but likewise the fundamental beliefs which today hold the Republican Party together throughout the Nation and will soon bring it back into power.

"In particular, we applaud those passages in the declaration which stress the opportunities which the Republican Party has for affirmative and constructive solutions of the tremendously intricate and difficult problems facing the Nation, and its strong emphasis on civil and social rights as a keystone for National unity."

The Republican National Committee will ignore the declaration, a spokesman said. Instead, the committee will go ahead compiling a list of what it considers to be mistakes in the Truman Administration's foreign policy, particularly in the Far East.

Another Fourth!

This is America's day. In times when the trouble-makers of the world sneer at patriotism, when love of country is considered old-fashioned — or worse — by the so-called "citizens of the world" it is good for us to re-dedicate ourselves to all that America means to us.

Liberty and freedom are not empty words nor too much used if we forever keep their vital significance in our minds.

Speeches, fireworks, flags and flowers on our loved ones eternal sleeping places, elaborate ceremonies—these are the visible, superficial symbols.

The truths that matter are the thoughts in our minds, the courage in our hearts to give the limit of ourselves to keeping America American.

Tax Bill Hearings to Go On remainder by plugging 465 million dollars in tax "loopholes."

During the meeting, it was learned, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), questioned the wisdom of proceeding with any tax legislation in the light of Korean developments, but did not press the point.

George was asked if he thought Congress would finally pass the tax bill if the Korean situation "doesn't clear up" at an early date.

"Nobody knows when the situation will clear up," said George. "I don't think it will by August 1. By proceeding this way, we at least will know what the situation is at any one time, and can decide what to do (about taxes)."

Appropriation Bill

Lucas informed the committee he hopes to have the big omnibus appropriation bill out of committee and before the Senate by early next week, possibly by next Monday. He promised to program the tax bill immediately after the Senate acts on appropriations.

Final action on appropriations is generally the bellwether to congressional adjournment, but House-Senate conference action on the big money bill may delay Capitol leave taking longer than usual.

George said some 80 persons had asked permission to testify on the House-passed tax bill, but the committee still expects to wind up hearings before the end of next week by meeting in the afternoon while the Senate is in session, and hold a Saturday hearing.

To further foreshorten the hearings, George said all witnesses will be asked to confine themselves to "new matter" and not duplicate testimony already presented to the House Ways and Means Committee.

Shaft Unveiled To Washington at Cambridge, Mass.

Cambridge, Mass., July 3 (AP).—A 30,000 Vermont granite monument to George Washington was unveiled tonight on the spot where he took command of the Continental Army just 175 years ago.

Created from two blocks of Barre granite totaling 32 tons, it measures 16 feet by 10. Called the Washington Elm Monument, the memorial is on Cambridge Common near the place where grew the giant tree that shaded Washington at the historic moment he took command of an unorganized, ill-trained group.

The monument was unveiled by Mrs. Lewis Preston Collins, wife of the lieutenant governor of Virginia, and Mrs. Frank A. K. Boland, wife of the originator of the plan to build the memorial.

Secretary of Labor Tobin represented President Truman at the ceremonies and compared him with George Washington.

Jelleff's

Nats Go Right on Beating Yanks, This Time, 7-2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

JOE DI MAGGIO sat by his locker, diligently pounding a pocket to his liking in the first baseman's mitt Johnny Mize provided for the Yankees' newest experiment. "Now if somebody will just show me where first base is, I'm ready," said DiMag.

It was typical Di Mag reaction to a situation. If he was feeling any pressure at being shoved into a new position after 15 years as the league's finest center fielder, it wasn't apparent.

POVICH

His total experience as a first baseman had been as a kid on the San Francisco sandlots, 19 years ago, but he wasn't letting that throw him. He was as composed as if he were up at the plate with the bases full and 70,000 fans screaming in his ears—you know, the kind of a situation in which Di Maggio is the calmest person in the park.

Out on the field during infield practice, Di Mag drew a swarm of cameramen eager to record his debut as a first baseman "Shoot your head off, boys" he grinned. "I don't know what kind of a first baseman I am yet, but I can put on an act for you."

TOMMY HENRICH, who had made a go of it at first base after ten years in the outfield, opined that DiMaggio would "do all right." Henrich said, "He's all ball player. There are a couple of things he'll have to learn about the job, but I don't know anybody who could learn quicker."

There were things like finding the bag with his feet, said Henrich. "Unless you're brought up on first base, you're apt to be groping for the bag with your feet," said Henrich. "Later on, you get the habit, and it's a breeze."

There will be the item, too, about learning how the infielders throw, said Tommy. "Some of 'em throw you balls that sink, others shoot you throws that take off. And Joe may be troubled about when to get off the bag and haul in a wild throw, but his instincts will take care of that after a while.

"And where do you find a ball player with better instincts?" said Henrich. "He won't make us or himself look bad, that I know."

THE MAJESTY OF Di Maggio and all the respect he commands in the baseball business is nevertheless no insulation against the barbs from opposing benches. Up in Fenway Park, where he worked out with a first baseman's mitt for the first time on Sunday, Joe became aware of that.

"Hey, Di Mag, better get some shinguards," yelled Birdie Tebbetts.

And at Griffith Stadium yesterday in the pre-game drill, Coach Joe Fitzgerald of the Nats couldn't resist the temptation to prod him. "Hey, Di Mag, you're just a fill-in," hollered Fritz. "They'll have Yogi Berra on first base next week."

The shift of Di Maggi to the infield was Casey Stengel's idea. He squared it with Joe first, in a hotel-room session at Boston Saturday, when he told his troubles to Di Mag. Stengel moaned that the Yankees couldn't use all their good-hitting outfielders; with the rest of the club in a batting slump, better hitters were riding the beach.

First Baseman Joe Collins wasn't hitting, and he couldn't ask pain-wracked Tommy Henrich to fill in, Stengel said, and would Joe try it? "Anyway you can help the club," was the answer he got.

IN STENGEL'S VIEW, Di Maggio at first base will be a double blessing to the Yanks. It will enable them to use such hitting outfielders as Bauer, Mapes and Woodling regularly, and bring out the full potential of Rookie Jackie Jensen. But Stengel had something else in mind.

"It will add a couple of years to Di Maggio's playing life," he declared. "Other outfielders stand out there and day-dream, but Di Mag is racing all over the place, backing up everybody's play when he isn't going for the ball himself. At his age, he's getting little rest. As a first baseman, he won't have to go so far."

Stengel broke Di Mag's travels down to a finer point by pointing out, "Joe won't have to take that long trip from the bench into center field and back 16 times a game, either. That's a long way, coming and going. To play first base, he'll just have to cross the diamond from the bench. And when we're in Yankee Stadium, he's not 20 feet from his job."

Tigers Down Chisox, 8-4, Now Lead by 4½ Games

Chicago, July 3 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers blasted two triples, a double and a home run among 14 hits and defeated the Chicago White Sox, 8-4, before 12,710 today.

The victory stretched their American League lead to 4½ games.

Freddy Hutchinson gained his ninth victory, although Paul Calvert and Dizzy Trout finished up. Starter Ken Holcombe, first of three Chicago pitchers, was the loser.

Vic Wertz shoved Detroit into an early lead in the first inning when he drove his No. 13 home run into the right field second deck after Johnny Lipon walked.

Detroit made it 4-0 in the second, Hutchinson singled for one run, and Jerry Priddy the second.

Phil Masi's No. 4 and Hank Majeski's No. 5 home runs, in the third and fifth innings, posted the first two Chicago runs.

Don Kolloway's double led to the fifth run in the sixth. Detroit scored again in the eighth, and got two more in the ninth.

Haas Shoots Record 64, Ties For Golf Lead

Detroit, July 3 (AP)—Lanky Fred Haas, jr., of Claremont, Calif., set a course record of 64—eight under par—at Red Run Country Club today to go into a three-way tie for the lead at the three-quarter mark of the $15,000 Motor City golf tournament.

Haas's record-breaking performance gave him a 54-hole total of 204, tying with Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago and Sammy Snead. Snead had 68 today while Mangrum scored a 70.

Dr. Cary Middlecoff, who took a one-stroke lead into today's play, skyrocketed to 75, three over par, and fell four strokes behind the leaders.

The 34-year-old Haas had a nifty putting touch as he bagged eight birdies and 10 pars. The former Louisiana State star had only one bad shot on his round and got a lucky break on that one as his tee shot sliced off a tree on the short 17th and fell fairly near the green for an easy par.

Haas's hot round escaped almost unnoticed by the big gallery of about 9,000 fans who had centered their attentions on the threesomes including Middlecoff and Mangrum.

Snead contributed the shot of the day as he holed out a 100-foot chip shot for an eagle two on the second hole after three-putting the first hole for a bogey six.

National Open Champion Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., as usual a magnet for a large gallery, had to settle for a 70 and 210 total, six strokes off the pace.

Home Run By Dark Tops Dodgers, 3-2

New York, July 3 (AP).—Alvin Dark hit a 280-foot home run in the 11th inning today to give the New York Giants a 3-2 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The blow broke up a tight hurling duel between Brooklyn's Preacher Roe and Larry Jansen of New York. It also dealt the slumping Dodgers their fifth straight defeat.

A crowd of 32,669 saw the Giants score a run in the first inning on Monte Irvin's double and Bobby Thompson's single.

Then the game turned into a battle of home runs.

Gene Hermanski made it 1-1 in third inning with a homer off the right field upper railing. Gil Hodges' No. 10 sent the National League champions ahead, 2-1, in the fifth and Hank Thompson tied the score with a line home run into the lower right field stands in the sixth inning.

Jansen, who allowed eight hits while fanning six, chalked up his seventh straight victory and ninth of the season. Roe suffered his fourth loss against nine wins. He permitted 10 hits.

Let 'Er Go, Joe, Let 'Er Go

Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

It looks as if Joe DiMaggio, playing his first game at first base for the New York Yankees, is about to pounce on this bunt by Mickey Vernon of the Nats in the seventh inning of yesterday's game at Griffith Stadium. But Joe's good baseball sense told him to let 'er go, which he did. And what looked at the moment like a hit for Vernon turned out to be no such thing as the ball rolled into foul territory. DiMaggio performed creditably in his new role but failed to hit. Rushing in on the play (No. 26) is Pitcher Tom Ferrick of the Yanks. The Nats won, 7-2.

Braves Knock Phillies Out of First Place, 3-1

Philadelphia, July 3 (AP).—The Boston Braves beat the Philadelphia Phillies, 3 to 1, today to make the National League's first division a highly congested place just one day short of the traditional midway point of the season.

The loss dropped the Phils out of first place and put them a half game and six percentage points behind the St. Louis Cardinals, who were rained out.

The Braves are within a game and a half of the Cardinals, and the Brooklyn Dodgers are three games off the pace.

Vern Bickford tamed the red hot Phils for the second time this season, limiting the Philadelphians to five safeties, all singles. The Braves got to Ken Heintzelman and his successor, Milo Candini, for only five hits but three of those were for extra bases, a homer by Bob Elliott and a pair of doubles by Tommy Holmes.

Locke Has 68 In British Open

Troon, Scotland, July 3—Two record performances were scored by British Open qualifiers who toured two courses today. Belgian Flory Van Donck ripped around par 70 Troon's sand dunes in 65 and Bobby Locke scored a sizzling 68 over the par 74 Lochgreen course near here.

Pro Johhny Bulla, Pittsburgh, shot a par 70 at Troon. Frank (Muscles) Stranahan, British amateur winner trying for a sweep, three-putted twice at Troon and took a 74.

Jimmy McHale, Philadelphia amateur, also three-putted twice at Lochgreen but sound chipping and tremendous drives earned him a par 74.

These three Americans seem sure of qualifying. Four other United States entrants look like they may drop out after tomorrow's second round when the field of 244 exchanges courses. They include Art Clark, Huntington, W. Va., and Sergt. Charles Rotar, pro from Canton, Ohio, and Frankfurt, Germany, who both took 78s at Troon.

Tribe Loses, Rosen Hits 25th Homer

Cleveland, July 3 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns temporarily detoured a mid-season pennant rush by the Cleveland Indians today, defeating them 4 to 2 in spite of a couple of late inning scares.

With Clarence Marshall on the mound for St. Louis, Cleveland had the bases filled with nobody out in the eighth. The best the Indians could do with that setup was to score one run.

Again in the ninth, with two out, Allie Clark and Luke Easter got to third and first on successive singles, but Larry Doby flied to left field and the 11,656 fans went home.

In the fourth, Dick Kokos slammed a home run over the right field fence to score Sherman Lollar ahead of him for the Browns.

Cleveland's Al Rosen, socked a home run, too, his 25th, in the fourth inning. It gave him the home run leadership in the American League, one ahead of Boston's Ted Williams.

Starr, who was credited with the victory, had to leave the game at th end of the sixth inning because of an upset stomach. Steve Gromek was the loser.

4-Run Sixth Wraps Up First Win For Al Sima

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Yankees unveiled Joe DiMaggio as their new first baseman yesterday but the Nats recognized 'em nevertheless as the same club they've been beating most of the season, and then did it afain, 7-2.

They gave Pitcher Fred Sanford a four-run shock treatment in the sixth inning and delivered to Rookie Al Sima, late of Chattanooga, his first major league victory.

The bespectacled curve-balling Sima held the Yankees to seven hits, with a lusty assist from Mickey Harris, the Nat's version of Joe Page. Harris walked into the game in the seventh when Sima was in trouble, and pleased the 9653 customers by getting everybody out.

It was the Nats' fifth victory in eight clashes with the Yankees this year, although there was some delay about it. They didn't get any kind of a hit off Sanford until the fifth inning, but then went off on a tear that brought Joe Ostrowski and Tom Ferrick, the emigres from the Browns, into action.

Di Maggio Hitless

Di Maggio went hitless, but he didn't botch anything around first base, except for one awkward display on a ball he had no chance to get. And he drew the cheers of the crowd in the eighth inning when he was pulled off the bag by a throw from Pitcher Ferrick, and smartly tagged Sherry Robertson on the baseline.

The Nats rocked Sanford for 7 of their 10 hits in two innings—the fifth and sixth tying the score at 1-1 in the fifth despite a near triple-play that was finally fouled up by the Yankees.

Mele's walk and a single by Michaels put runners on first and second with none out when Rizzuto made a leaping grab of Dente's liner to set up the triple-play possibilities. Rizzuto easily doubled Mele off second, and Michaels was duck soup for Coleman's relay to DiMaggio, but his throw went into the dirt wide of the bag, and Michaels scrambled to second on the error.

Al Evans then produced the tying run with a solid single to center that scored Michaels.

Berra Helps Rally

They heaped it on the Yankees in the sixth. Stewart banged a ball toward right, and DiMaggio after starting for the hit, sprawled on his face when he tried to get back to the bag. The ball skidded off Gerry Coleman's glove for a two-bagger.

Yogi Berra gave the Nats a lift at that point when he fielded Noren's bunt, was surprised to find nobody covering third, and then held the ball for no reason, Noren reaching first. Mickey Vernon singled Stewart home, Mele sacrificed, Cass Michaels dropped a two-run single into left, and Sam Dente got the fourth run of the inning home from first with a line-drive triple to left center.

That uprising finished off Sanford and Joe Ostrowski finally got the side out. He was relieved by Tom Ferrick in the seventh, and Eddie Stewart improved the Nats' lead to 6-1 with an inside-the-park homer to left center that skipped past Mapes.

In the eighth, with two out, Dente singled, went to second on a passed ball and scored on Evans' single to center.

Sima didn't walk anybody until the seventh, when Bucky Harris finally got him out of there. He gave up a run to the Yanks in the third on Coleman's double and Berra's single to left with two out, and had a 5-1 lead when the Yanks threatened in the seventh.

Have No Fear, Mickey is Here

Bauer opened that inning with a single and took second when Stewart bobbled the ball. Johnson scored him with a single to center, but Michaels made a clever play on Jensen's smash to force Johnson. However, when Mapes drew a walk and the Yanks sent Pinch Hitter Mize up to swing, Harris got the call from the bullpen.

With men on first and second and one out, Harris didn't dally. He got rid of Mize and then Rizzuto on a total of three pitches that produced two fly balls to Irv Noren.

In the eighth and ninth, they didn't come close to getting any kind of a hit off Harris, and the Nats reclaimed sole possession of fifth place from the losing White Sox.

Wimbledon Crowd Acts Up

Wimbledon, July 3 (AP)—An unprecedented rhubarb rocked staid Wimbledon today when the all-England lawn tennis matches were called after bad weather permitted only four players to squeeze in an hour's play.

About half the 2000 who bought daily admission tickets to the center court jammed the main entrance, demanding their money back or rain checks.

It sounded more like Brooklyn's Ebbets Field than the normal polite hand-clapping gathering at British sports events. Police reserves were summoned to quell the disturbance and the crowd finally agreed to leave when the management made a slight concession.

It promised to give the hard bitten fans the right to buy tickets at the head of the queque tomorrow.

Some of the crowd's disappointment must have been occasioned by the fact that two upsets appeared in the making. Art Larsen, San Leandro, Calif., took the first set off top-seeded Frank Sedgman, 10-8, and was all even with the Australian at 2-2 when play was stopped.

Budge Patty transplanted California from Paris, held a 5-2 edge over second-seeded Billy Talbert of New York in the third set after they had split the first two. Talbert won, 6-3, and lost, 4-6.

Weather permitting, the two matches will be continued tomorrow from the point they were interrupted.

Lou Bevil, manager of the Annis Club, was injured seriously.

Bevil, who shortened his name from Bevilackqua, pitched for the Washington Nats briefly in 1943 and later managed Washington's Orlando, Fla., farm team. He became manager of Anniston only two weeks ago.

Timely Rain Provides Victory for Mud-Loving Grand Mars

Bill Bennings . . .

AT CHARLESTOWN

DEAR FOLKS:

Racing Secretary Fred Burton has arranged a bangup holiday program with the Independence Day and Fire Cracker purses as the features. But don't let that second name give anybody ideas. A racetrack is a spot where fire crackers are banned. Naturally, they frighten the horses, and a frightened horse often spells an accident.

So shoot your fireworks elsewhere. The popular spot here these days is the air-conditioned club house, one of the few in the country.

Old timers were discussing methods used to make some horses run. "I remember a horse at Latonia who would not run unless he heard stable boys beating on empty tin tubs along the backstretch," said an official. "When the boys came out with the tubs, the local crowd used to get their money down." See you on the rail. BILL.

Gelding Pays $8.60 After Track Flood

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., July 3.—Joe Paoli's Grand Mars, a chestnut gelding who is partial to a sloppy track, made the most of a sudden shower that flooded the oval and he ran off with the Advance Guard purse, featuring the Monday program here.

With E. Carrillo in the saddle, Grand Mars won by four lengths with Bridgeforth and Wright's Bachelor Belle second, three lengths ahead of E. F. Brining's Mamaloi.

With Tipstaff, an entry mate scratched, Grand Mars was only lukewarm in the betting and paid an $8.60-win mutuel after the crowd had installed Mamaloi as the favorite. The winner was clocked in 1.28 3-5 for the about seven furlongs.

Mamaloi went to the front in the first few jumps and set a good pace, followed by Scot's Sun, Bachelor Belle and Grand Mars. Along the backstretch, Carrillo took Grand Mars to the outside and the gelding flashed into the lead and began to draw out. Mamaloi finally faltered badly, but Bachelor Belle came on boldly.

In the final drive Carillo did not look back. He kept the 5-year-old Grand Mars doing his best. However, he had Bachelor Belle beaten through the final eighth.

Jockey Johnny Tammaro, popular veteran rider, produced the first winner of his current comeback in the fourth race, keeping J. M. Rogers' Woofie to a drive to score with daylight to spare over Norman B. Frost's Dreist and W. C. Land's Brooke Argo. The winner paid $9.40 and went the about seven furlongs in 1.30 1-5.

Apprentice Doyle Gardner, who came here from the West Coast, made his presence felt by piloting two winners. He figured in a $13 daily double payoff when he rode P. A. Rothfuss' Just A Foot home in the first race at $3.80. J. Frederick's Lucky Mystery won the second event at $7.60.

Gardner's second winner came in the third race. He gave Mrs. J. M. P. Bell's Frigate a rousing ride. The winner was a $4.80 favorite.

2 D. C. Speedsters Steal Show

Carbo Thrills Fans At Hampton Regatta

By Happy Walker

Hampton, Va., July 3. — Two Washington speed merchants, one a beginner and one an older hand, stole the show here today as the last half of the Hampton Yacht Club and Hampton Power Boat Association's four-day Marine Festival got under way.

William R. Carbo, Washington sophmore driver, won the second heat of the BU class, treating the crowd to a thrilling display of driving.

After a poor start, Carbo flashed past Sterling Wingo of Baltimore 300 yards from the finish to win the heat. However, Carbo wound up in second place in the class behind Wingo who amassed 627 points. Carbo finished with 525 points.

In the C Hydro Class, it was Washington's Hudson Moses at the wheel of Miss Daphne, who chased veteran Nick Allen, jr., Newport News, Va., speedster four laps around the course, finally passing Allen a matter of seconds away from the finish line, to lead a field of eight top drivers.

This performance came after an 800 mile drive from College Point, New York, yesterday, where Moses took two seconds in C hydros and two firsts in F hydros.

Moses lost a heartbreaker for first place in the final standings on best elapsed time. Allen beat out the Washington Hotel Executive by only 6.5 seconds for the best elapsed time.

The wind swept course was the undoing of several of the daring speed boat drivers, J. J. Arthur, jr., New Bern, N. C.; Henry Johnson, Hampton, Va., and Dick Bowers, Washington Naval officer, all flipped their craft, attempting to take the hazardous turns wide-open.

Tomorrow, the heavier inboards and hydroplanes take over in what is expected to be an exciting and hotly contested program of events.

The Washington Post

POTOMAC STALEMATE—Faulty brake mechanism of the draw of the new 14th Street Bridge was blamed yesterday for delaying the tanker A. C. Dodge for three quarters of an hour when only half the draw opened. Also delayed were hundreds of irate motorists, who had to wait until the one half was lowered and then both halves later raised. Bridge Operator M. E. Thomas of Arlington said yesterday was the third time the draw has had mechanical trouble. Tanker, bound downstream, is shown waiting after lone half was finally lowered

A 50-year-old woman became Washington's thirty-fourth traffic victim this year when struck yesterday as she ran across a street.

Mrs. Margaret Ann Arnold of 218 E st. nw., a widow, was hit by a car operated by James L. LeFort, 23, of 4618 Livingston rd. se., police said, when she was crossing the street in front of 211 E st. nw., at 4:25 p. m.

She was taken to Casualty Hospital, where she was treated for a fractured skull and fractured jaw, but lived only an hour.

Police were still investigating the accident last night and no charges had been placed against LeFort.

Gaithersburg Boy Hurt Darting Before Auto

A 9-year-old Gaithersburg boy was hurt shortly after 6 p. m. last night when, police said, he darted in front of a car on a road between Gaithersburg and Emory Grove, Md.

The boy, Stephen Carrol, jr., was taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, by the Gaithersburg Rescue Squads. Doctors said he had a possible fracture of both legs, and internal injuries.

Montgomery County police said no charges had been placed against the driver of the car, whom they identified as Elmer H. Lawson, 37, of Route 2, Gaithersburg.

Former District Woman Dies in Texas Crash

Mrs. Marion Storm, prominent in Texas political circles and a former Washington resident, was killed Sunday in a three-car accident in Texas, friends here learned yesterday.

Injured seriously in the accident was Mrs. Margaret Townsley, of 568 Beacon rd., Silver Spring, Md., who was traveling with Mrs. Storm.

Member of the Texas State Democratic Executive Committee, Mrs. Storm was the widow of Joseph D. Storm, killed in World War II.

She is survived by her mother, a sister who lives in the Washington area, Mrs. Llewellyn Griffith, of 321 N. Thomas st., Arlington, and another sister in Texas.

The family requests that in place of flowers, contributions be made toward a scholarship at the University of Texas.

Woman Victim of Truck Fall in Serious State

Mrs. Betty L. Kinser, 36, of 607 North Carolina ave. se., remained in critical condition in Gallinger Hospital last night with internal injuries, a possible fractured pelvis and face cuts.

Mrs. Kinser was injured when she fell from the cab of a truck driven by her husband, Horace L. Kinser, also 35. Kinser told police the right rear wheel of the truck passed over her body.

An Errand of Mercy for Boy in Iron Lung

COMFORTED—Nurse Leila Stuckey comforts Harold Kogod in his iron lung as members of Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad prepare to put him aboard truck for what proved to be a dramatic and dangerous trip from his home to Children's Hospital

Hospital. When the truck reached 32d and Q sts. nw., a squad member called out that the electric motor running the lung had stopped.

The driver immediately pulled to the curb. Chief Donald Dunnington, Sergt. Bob Sigwald and Pvt. Loyal Fisher ran to the nearest house.

Puzzled Housewife

Dunnington jerked open the door. His men dragged in the heavy electric cord. All three, on hands and knees, began looking for an electric outlet. On the truck, young Harold was gasping for breath.

At the head of the stairs, a woman spied the men. "What are you men doing crawling around under my dining room table?" she asked.

"Emergency, lady," snapped Dunnington.

They found an outlet, plugged in the cord. Harold's breathing went back to normal. The lady got her question answered.

In a matter of moments, the squadmen transferred from the portable generator, that had been powering the lung, to its own generator. The trip to the hospital was completed without further mishap.

Muscles Paralyzed

Dr. Morris Chase, Kogods' physician, said he ordered Harold to the hospital yesterday when an accumulation of mucus in his system was blocked because of paralyzed respiratory muscles.

He said Harold, who contracted poliomyletis last September 6, had been under treatment at Children's until June 28, when he was thought well enough to be sent home.

Hospital treatment was required again to use a bronchoscope to free the trapped mucus. Dr. Chase said Harold was in fair condition yesterday.

Harold is the son of Samuel Kogod, a merchant, and Mrs. Kogod. There are two other children, Leslie, 5, and Ronald, 2.

Backlog Of Untried Court Cases Increasing

Municipal Judges Make New Record Of Dispositions In Year, However

Despite the addition of three judges and the disposition of a record number of cases, the backlog of untried cases in District Court increased by 539 during fiscal 1949.

It now takes 20 months from the time a jury case is calendered until it is tried, Assignment Commissioner Richard L. Collins revealed yesterday in his annual report.

As of July 1, 1950, 1049 cases more than one year old remained to be tried, the figures showed.

The judges disposed of 3803 civil cases during the fiscal year—from July 1, 1949, to June 30, 1950—as against only 3223 for the previous 12 months, an increase of 580.

But on July 1, 1950, 4219 civil cases were awaiting trial, compared to 3702 at the same time last year, a jump of 517.

On the criminal side the judges disposed of 2095 cases last year, compared to only 1666 in the previous year.

The criminal backlog rose only slightly, from 67 cases ready to be tried July 1, 1949, to 89 on July 1, 1950, a rise of 22.

Collins said that an unusually large number of lengthy civil suits contributed to the increased backlog on the civil calendar. Contested civil jury cases increased from 1519 to 1802. Uncontested divorce actions increased from 1691 to 2001.

The report showed that as of June 30, 1950, approximately 20 months would elapse between the time a jury case was placed on the civil calendar and the date it would be reached for a final trial. At the end of June, 1949, the period was only 12 months.

In a nonjury civil case, the 1950 situation was an improvement over the previous year. As of June 30, 1950, approximately 15 months would elapse from the time a nonjury case was placed on the civil calendar and the date it would be reached for a final trial. The time lag during fiscal 1948 was 17 months.

Fay Backed In Gambling Phone Action

The Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the right of the United States attorney to initiate telephone removal proceedings against suspected gamblers, even in Maryland.

The court held that U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay could not be legally enjoined from asking the telephone company to discontinue service to Nathan Miller, 4923 LaSalle rd., Avondale, Md.

Fay was enjoined in District Court last April, and yesterday's opinion reversed the lower court and set aside the injunction.

The unanimous opinion was written by Judge David L. Bazelton, with Judges Henry W. Edgerton and Charles Fahy concurring.

Fay was not subject to suit, the judges ruled, because his action "was that of the United States" and because Miller was "assured of his day in court by way of a suit to enjoin the telephone company."

Fay started the proceedings against Miller on March 25, 1949, when he wrote the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore that he had "competent evidence" that Miller's telephone was being used" to aid and abet in the violation of statutes prohibiting gambling in the District," and requesting that Miller's telephone be yanked.

The decision will not affect the telephone service, which Miller still has. The telephone company was enjoined along with Fay in April, 1949, from removing Miller's telephone. Only Fay appealed.

The Federal Diary

Thousands of U. S. Employes Toil Today

By Jerry Kluttz

This won't be a holiday for thousands of Federal employes.

In fact, it will be work harder than usual for many employes in the White House, State and Defense Departments, Army, Navy, Air Force, National Security Resources Board, Central Intelligence and FBI among other agencies.

Furthermore, many other officials and employes alike, while they're relaxing today, will be mulling over war plans for their agencies—just in case.

Holiday plans for many employes here in the sensitive defense agencies have been canceled or restricted. Scores of employes on leave are being called back to work ahead of schedule.

The Korean crisis is an excellent bet to kill the House-approved rider to force employes to take annual leave this year as they earn it or else lose it. In addition, it may postpone or stop the proposed White House policy to encourage employes to take annual leave as they earn it.

The Korean fighting is changing a lot of plans.

Leaps From Boat

Alexandria Boy Drowns In Quarry

A 10-year-old Alexandria boy was drowned yesterday in a water-filled quarry behind the Northern Virginia Construction Co., off Telegraph rd. in Fairfax County, where he had gone swimming with two young companions.

Fairfax County police identified the lad as Charles (Buddy) Hise of 110 E. Walnut st., Alexandria. He was pronounced dead about 2½ hours after rescue workers pulled his body from the pond used as a reservoir by the construction company to provide a supply of water for washing sand and gravel.

Police said Buddy jumped from a rowboat they had found on a bank into about 8 feet of water after telling his companions in the boat he could swim. One of Buddy's companions, Bobby Gilley, 12, of 14 E. Walnut st., Alexandria, said young Hise told him he was "all right" a second before he disappeared beneath the surface after floundering in the water for several minutes.

With Buddy and Bobby in the rowboat was Teddy Young, 10, 301 E. Oak st., Alexandria. Both he and Gilley said they dived several times in a vain effort to find Buddy's body.

The body was found by workers from the Alexandria and Pen-Daw rescue squad about 10 minutes after their arrival and an estimated 20 minutes after he had gone under the water. They used oxygen and artificial respiration in an unsuccessful effort to revive the boy after Dr. Arthur Mourot, of Alexandria, said he thought he detected a faint sign of a heartbeat.

Buddy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hise and was a fifth-grade student at the Maury Elementary School in Alexandria. His father, an insurance salesman, told police the boy could not swim.

6 Visitors Felled By Food Poisoning Picnicking Here

Six tourists, picnicking in Washington, were attacked by food poisoning last night.

Fire Rescue Squad No. 2 found the victims, two from Frederick, Md., and four from Chisholm, Me., stricken in a car parked in the 7900 block of 16th st. nw.

Chicken salad sandwiches made in Maine Saturday were blamed by hospital officials.

A 6-year-old girl, Jane Doiron, escaped, police said, because she "wasn't hungry."

The Maine family made the sandwiches before they left Chisholm, police said, and ate the last of them, with two friends from Frederick, about 6 p. m. last night.

Emergency Hospital expected to release all six patients today.

The sufferers were Jennie Doiran, 57, Cam Doiran, 35; Evelyn Doiran, 28, and Stanley Davison, 60, of Chisholm, and Ruth Herring, 31, and Albert Herring, 34, of 234 Carroll ave., Frederick.

$1000 Forgery Case Dropped

The case against three Arlington men accused of forging $1000 worth of checks was nolle prossed yesterday in Arlington Circuit Court.

Dropped were charges against Jay D. Zirkle, 27, of 1417 N. Kenilworth st., Ernest J. Jackson, jr., 19, of 17 S. Lexington st., and Buck Goins, 28, of 6107 N. 18th st. A fourth man, Samuel Birnbaum, 28, of 6107 N. 18th st., was found guilty last month on one count of check forgery in the same case. He received a 9-month suspended sentence.

D. C. Family Held Up by Bandit Pair

Members of a Washington family who took a late Sunday night ride to cool off came back shortly before midnight to find their Georgia ave. apartment ransacked and in possession of two men, one armed with a nickel-plated gun.

They are Maurice K. Lewis, who operates a 5 and 10 cent store at 4805 Georgia ave. nw., his wife, Edith, and their son, Mark, who live in an apartment over the store.

Lewis told police that the men threatened him and his family with death if they disobeyed orders. He was told to hand over his wallet, from which they took $30 in bills. They also took his wrist watch.

The men apparently had conducted an extensive search of the apartment for receipts from Lewis' store. Lewis said they threatened to harm his son if he didn't turn over the money. When he told them he had no receipts in the apartment, they ordered Lewis, his wife and son into the bathroom, and told them to stay there for 15 minutes.

When the Lewises emerged, the men had left, apparently the way they entered, through the kitchen door in which the glass had been broken.

Lewis described the men, both Negroes, as light-skinned. One is between 25 and 30 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs about 135 pounds and has a thin face, with a pencil mustache. The other, between 30 and 35 years old, is 5 feet 10 inches, of heavy build, and weighs about 175 pounds.

$113,100 Asked To Run Rent Control Setup

The Budget Bureau is expected shortly to send Congress a request for $113,100 to run the District's rent-control program through next January.

The request may go to the Capitol Wednesday or Thursday.

District budget officials said the money includes $79,100 to cover expenses for the new fiscal year, which began July 1, through January 31, when rent control will end unless extended by Congress.

Another $34,000 is being asked to pay terminal leave to rent control employes.

Pay checks through June 30 are being distributed at Rent Control Administration headquarters, but no money is available for the next pay day, July 18.

The Senate, due to take up the District's annual appropriation bill this week, may add the rent control money to the House-approved bill if the Budget Bureau request is received in time. If not, it will have to be handled in a separate deficiency appropriation measure.

Funds also are needed to continue the day care centers which Congress has approved for three more years.

Court Moves Post-Depression Record of Drunks in One Day

A twenty-year record number of 231 drunks was processed through Municipal Court yesterday.

William A. Norgren, deputy chief clerk of the criminal division, said that the previous high was approximately 290.

Judge Thomas C. Scalley was called in to assist Judge George D. Nelson in disposing of the group.

Superintendent Curtis Reid of the District Jail said the drunks were still being processed with baths and new clothes at 6 p. m.

Five van loads of approximately 40 were removed from Municipal Court by deputy U. S. Marshals, a new record, according to court veterans.

Catholic War Veterans Elect V. R. Glocheski

Comdr. V. R. Glocheski, USN, of 321 Forest dr., Falls Church, has been elected commander of the Department of Virginia Catholic War Veterans.

He was named on Sunday at a Norfolk, Va., meeting of department officers and post commanders. Commander Glocheski is a member of the Martin Post of St. James Catholic Church, Falls Church.

3 New Cases Of D. C. Polio Are Reported

Three polio cases were reported yesterday by the District Health Department bringing the city's total for the year to 10. Four cases had been reported at this time a year ago.

The new cases are at Children's Hospital and come from the northeast section of the city. Dr. Carl C. Dauer, director of the Health Department's Bureau of Preventable Diseases, said there was no significance in this since the victims live in widely separated neighbodhoods.

The children are a five-year-old girl, 600 block of Monroe st. ne.; four-year-old boy, 1100 block 16th st. ne.; 4½-year-old boy from the 600 block of 8th st. ne.

Killing One

Court Backs Award in Explosion

The Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed a $17,000 damage verdict awarded by a District Court jury to the widow of a man killed in a home gas explosion in 1947, and to two survivors.

The Washington Gas Light Co. was found liable in the wrongful death of Giuseppe Biancaniello. The company appealed on the grounds that the lower court erred in submitting the case to a jury because, it claimed, the evidence was insufficient.

Biancaniello, his brother and a nephew were laying a tile floor in the basement of their home at 911 Decatur st., nw., when the explosion occurred.

The Court of Appeals, in a five-page opinion, ruled that the evidence of a leaking gas meter "adequately supported a finding that the explosion was caused by gas vapors and that the (company's) negligence was the proximate cause thereof."

The opinion was written by Judge Bennett Champ Clark, with Judges David L. Bazelton and Charles Fahy concurring.

54 U. S. Workers Get $1500 for Ideas

Fifty-four Washington Area residents in the Treasury Department yesterday received a total of $1500 in cash awards for helping the Government save $158,000 in the issuance of GI life insurance dividend checks.

The awards were the first distributed under a new law authorizing paid recognition "for reducing the cost of operations." The group managed to cut issuance cost per check from about 4½ cents to 3½.

Secretary Snyder, in presenting the $25 to $50 awards, said Congress last year provided $637,900 for expenses in issuing the 14,225,000 checks, but actual costs were held down to $479,900 through the efforts of the rewarded employes.

New 14th Police Precinct to Open August 1

The Washington Post

PROGRESS REPORT—Completed exterior of new stationhouse at 42d and Benning rd. ne.

The new Fourteenth Precinct Headquarters, in the works for more than two years, is expected to be opened on August 1, it was learned yesterday.

The building, at 42d st. and Benning rd. ne., is completed outwardly, but awaits linoleum flooring, wall plastering, some tiling work, general landscaping, and provision of a parking lot for impounded cars.

Victor N. Judson, contractor for the job, had promised that the building would be ready by June 19, but work was delayed because of a steel shortage.

Plans for the new precinct stationhouse were completed in 1948, when Congress authorized a $174,000 appropriation for its construction. The National Capital Parks Commission traded the District a plot of land 113 by 218 feet for the site.

But before work was actually begun, building and material costs had zoomed up beyond the project cost limitation. Congress came through on June 23, 1949, with a special deficiency appropriation of $50,000 to insure completion of the work.

The two-story brick structure is 106 feet long, has a 75-foot front, is 67 feet deep and has 16 rooms and 10 cells. The room plan is designed to keep prisoners away from the general public. Prisoners will enter the stationhouse through a garage, will be booked at a desk there, and will be taken to cells. The general public will use the main door of the building.

Furniture already has been purchased, and is now being stored in the basement of police headquarters at the Municipal Center. It will be taken over to the new building when the floor is complete.

The new stationhouse will be manned by 68 persons, including a captain, three lieutenants, three sergeants, and three corporals.

Since the Fourteenth Precinct was created in 1948 out of the old Eleventh Precinct, it has been housed in a temporary building, annex to the Davis School, at 44th and H sts. se.

Policeman Told He Can't Tote Gun Home

An argument between a District policeman, who lives in Greenbelt, and a neighbor has resulted in an order forbidding the policeman to carry his service revolver into his home community.

The ban, imposed on Metropolitan Police Pvt. William J. Zerwick, 37, by his superior, Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives, will remain in effect pending the outcome of assault and battery charges sworn against him by the neighbor, Zerwick, who lives at 13-L Ridge rd., Greenbelt, is assigned to the missing persons and investigations squad.

Captain Murray's action was taken after Greenbelt authorities informed him of the neighborhood affair and that some community residents had complained of Zerwick's having the weapon in his possession. Zerwick is not accused of having attempted to use the revolver in the dispute, however.

Chief George Panagoulis of the Greenbelt Police Department, said several citizens had complained about Zerwick.

He described the incidents leading to the complaints and the ban as follows:

Zerwick and a neighbor, Samuel Gottesman of 13-G Ridge rd., became involved in an argument over their children on June 24, which caused Gottesman to swear an assault and battery warrant against the policeman.

A cross-warrant was sworn out by Zerwick accusing Gottesman of striking his 4-year-old son, Terry. Hearing on both charges will be held Thursday in Hyattsville Police Court.

Meanwhile, Zerwick is dropping his revolver nightly at the Twelfth Precinct Station on his way home and picking it up each morning.

Police regulations require a policeman to have his weapon in his possession at all times, both on and off duty.

Brumidi Grave To Be Marked This Summer

The grave of Constantine Brumidi, Italian artist whose fresco in the Capitol was the first in America, is to be marked some time this summer under terms of a bill signed last week by President Truman.

The measure allots $500 for the marker. Brumidi's grave in Glenwood Cemetery here was unmarked until about five years ago when Mrs. Myrtle Cheney Murdock, wife of Representative John R. Murdock (D., Ariz.) located it. Brumidi lived from 1805 to 1880.

Mrs. Murdock, who has done extensive research on the life of the Italian artist, has completed a book on Brumidi's works, to be published in October under auspices of the National League of American Penwomen.

The artist is principally remembered for his fresco over the canopy of the dome and for the unfinished frieze on the Capitol dome. Brumidi died of injuries he suffered in a fall from scaffolding while working on the frieze.

E. Saarinen, Architect, Dead at 76

Detroit, July 3 (AP).—One of the great influences in modern architecture is dead. Eliel Saarinen, 76, who won international fame as an architect and city planner, died Saturday night at his suburban Bloomfield Hills home.

Mr. Saarinen

A Finnish expatriate, Mr. Saarinen was noted for building designs throughout the world. But he was best known for his plans, both on paper and in his far-seeking vision, for there-creation and modernization of entire cities.

He headed the architectural department of the Cranbrook Academy of Arts at Bloomfield Hills, an enterprise he has been associated since its beginning 25 years ago.

A painter first, Mr. Saarinen turned to architecture at the age of 22. One of his first successes was Finland's pavilion for the Paris Exposition of 1900, in its simplicity a great relief to the wedding-cake monstrosities built by other nations.

In 1923, Mr. Saarinen came to America, and soon sent for his family, believing the future of his monumental ambitions to be in this country.

With his son and daughter, he worked in the firm of Saarinen, Saarinen & Associates. Among their famous buildings are the Tanglewood and Buffalo concert halls, and the Crow Island School in Winnetka, Ill. He also won acclaim for his design for a national collection of Fine Arts buildings in Washington, for which money is still to be appropriated.

One on the Aisle—

A Bride's Father And His Nightmares

By Richard L. Coe

IN "FATHER OF THE BRIDE," the Palace brings you a cheerful package of smiles and laughter. You'll enjoy it.

Metro's production and the screen adaptation by the experienced Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett from Ed Streeter's whimsical book are sleek and shiny, which may or may not please you, but they have caught the essential quality of Streeter's musings.

He wrote, as you remember, more of a long essay than the films usually pick up for screening. He was not telling a story, the way movies think of stories; instead he was commenting on a social custom. Inevitably, ahem, in our society this is a widely-observed custom and the result is that so fancy a cast and production has been lavished on what otherwise might frighten the story-minded moguls. A lot of people may recognize themselves.

We follow Daughter Elizabeth Taylor's engagement and wedding from the eyes of her father, Spencer Tracy. He feels butterflies when he discovers that the father of the bride supplies everything except the groom, that guest lists have a way of hitting 500 at only cursory thought, that the home he's always felt pretty good can raise the eyebrows of caterers and florists, that from Pittsburgh to Westchester his daughter's wedding seems to be the only event of a summer Saturday, that clothes, hats, shoes, luggage have to be considered as well as paid for and that the person most counted on to supply the handsomest wedding gift is likely to contribute only a monstrous clock. These and similar educations form the picture.

It is, in short, then, an essay and one welcomes such an approach to major studio movie-making. It admits that audiences can be entertained without a formal story. This, it seems to me, is the unspoken value of "Father of the Bride." Already plans are afoot for a sequel, which doesn't seem particularly advisable unless Streeter's words may be the initial crutch.

For, as a few American and a considerable number of European film-makers have shown us, the style of the essay can be adapted to celluloid. It requires a trust in the audience that Metro's present exhibit still doesn't always believe in, but it opens the road for other full-fledged notations on the hazards of polite civilization. Let us hope, then, that "Father of the Bride" serves as a forerunner not simply of the Banks family, but of the genial film that muses about the little things of life.

The performances are generally right on the button. Miss Taylor is utterly charming as the bride and Joan Bennet unconquerably chic as the mother. Tracy enjoys his informality, a contagious pleasure, and Leo G. Carroll is superb as the soigne caterer. And it's nice to have Billie Burke as the mother of the groom. The groom? Oh, yes, he's Don Taylor, and a clean, natural performance is his.

MURIEL HUTCHISON steps into the role of the rambunctious actress sudden illness forces Jean Parker to vacate in Olney's "Light Up the Sky." . . . Nationalities will remember Muriel in "The Land Is Bright," the curiously enlivening drama which somehow fizzled from the combined forces of Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman . . . Tonight's Moss Hart comedy about theater folk reminds you too that Miss Hutchison played the another actress for Hart, Lorraine Sheldon, in his "The Man Who Came to Dinner." . . . And did you notice that mailbox "Moss Kaufman" in Keith's Marx Bros. spoof??

"ANNIE GET YOUR GUN," having been one of the few recent pictures to hold a third week downtown, this morning moves over to the Columbia, which makes the Irving Berlin tunefest a real record-breaker.

BRIDEGROOM OF THE BRIDE: Elizabeth Taylor asks her fiance, Don Taylor, what's in the briefcase. Just stuff to prove to her father he can support her, Don explained in the comedy from Ed Streeter's book, "Father of the Bride," now at the Palace

Celebrations Aren't All Rustic Style

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

PROOF that not EVERYONE has left town were the number of pre-holiday parties on the calendar yesterday.

Today embassies and legations will hoist their flags in honor of the day and all over the world American diplomats will be celebrating. Picnics will be in order here and even members of the British Embassy staff will find it in their hearts to rejoice with their Yankee friends. They've been invited by Leander McCormick-Goodhart to bring their basket supper to Bellapais, his estate on the Potomac below Alexandria.

Deb Departs on Summer Round

MISS SUE ANN ROUSE, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Rouse, was entertained on Friday afternoon by Miss Joan Conger at a luncheon and swimming party at the Congressional Country Club. Miss Conger is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay P. Conger.

After the luncheon party, Miss Rouse left for Reigelsville, Pa., for a month's visit with Miss Louisa Smith, daughter of Mrs. James E. Smith. Miss Rouse made her bow to society at a tea dance at the Shoreham on June 14.

Lucky Folks Laze In Summer Sun

A lucky 16 were invited by Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz for luncheon on Sunday in honor of the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Forrest Sherman, and Mrs. Sherman. Guests sat on the terrace which looks out over Washington, and then lazed away the afternoon hours at the swimming pool.

The Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani were there and the Peruvian Ambassador, Fernando Berckemeyer. (Senora de Berckemeyer is in California.) Also in the group were the new Greek Ambassador, Athanasios Politis, and Senator and Mrs. William Knowland.

Minerva Heller of Hyattsville, Md., is the eleventh girl from the Washington area who will be a freshman at Smith College in the fall. She's the winner of the annual scholarship given by the Smith Club of Washington.

Birthday Celebrated At Cocktail Party

ROGER B. DOULENS of New Alexandria entertained at cocktails yesterday at the Belle Haven Country Club in celebration of Mrs. Doulens' birthday. Among the guests invited from military, residential and sporting circles were Vice Admiral and Mrs. Leland Lovette, Rear Admiral and Mrs. H. B. Duckworth, Capt. and Mrs. Joseph Kane, Col. and Mrs. John Dick, Judge and Mrs. Evan Howell, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Mourot and Col. and Mrs. Edward Backus.

The great Joe Di Maggio was named on the guest list. So were H. Gabriel Murphy, new vice president of the Washington baseball team, with Mrs. Murphy, and Bucky Harris, manager of the Senators.

Still others were William Huggins, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Minor. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Davis, Col. and Mrs. William Wells and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Flynn.

MANY a miss will come home from her long July Fourth holiday with a new complexion. Keeping her sun-baked skin soft and properly lubricated will be one of her summer's grooming problems. Also, she'll need to match her make-up with her suddenly altered skin tones. Best bet for the lass who has a beautiful even tan is a few drops of oil to lend a satiny sheen

Summertime Grooming No Cinch

By Peggy Preston

SUMMER grooming can be the darndest problem.

Reading breezily-written articles about how easy it is to look and feel cool despite the heat, doesn't help the situation, either. Or the disposition, for that matter.

Yet, there really are a few sensible steps we can take that will help us be neater and cooler during the sweltering season. We may never be able to attain the look of a fresh, dewy Hollywood starlet, or an impeccable fashion model. But at least we can give the routine a whirl.

SULTRY summer days call for sheer cotton to allow the skin proper air-conditioning. A dress such as this of soft chambray with muted stripes, cut with wide, full skirt and easy shoulders is ideal. White cotton shortie gloves add a bright, clean touch, and keep your hands from getting sticky and grubby

Start with your own home. Take down the drapes, roll up the rugs, store away all the knick-knacks, cushions, etc. Generally de-clutter the place. It's really true, a sense of bareness in a room is cooling to the eye.

Fragrant Soap And Talcum Needed

PUT your creams, lotions, colognes in the ice-box, and stock the bathroom with a good supply of fragrant soap and talcum powder.

Buy as much cotton lingerie as you can afford. This fabric absorbs perspiration and air-cools the skin on a scorching day. Get some porous, lightweight white cotton gloves, which will keep your hands from getting sticky and grubby. Sheer cotton dresses are still the most comfortable summer uniform for women when the weather really gets steamy.

Lock up your costume jewelry for the season, and keep out only a few loose strands of beads and some earrings.

Stockings in Town Protect the Feet

WEAR stockings in town. They'll protect your feet from hot pavements, keep shoes from chafing and preserve innersoles as well. Keep your shoes as light and airy as possible, and for very warm weather nothing is healthier for the feet than loosely woven straw sandals.

Do something about your hair. Clip it as short as possible. Or, if that is not becoming, figure out a way of pinning it prettily up off the neck. Hot, stringy hair can do a thorough wrecking job on a girl's morale.

Unless you're a confirmed "sun baby," stay out of the way of the solar rays as much as possible. But if a sun tan is what you like, be prepared to take some definite grooming steps.

Try and get an even tan and beware of overdoing it if you don't want to spend the summer nursing a cracked and discolored skin. Use plenty of skin oils or lotions while you are in the sun, and match your make-up to your new complexion.

Too much make-up in the summer is worse than none at all. If your tan is becoming, try a drop or two of oil and nothing else. It will give your skin a satiny sheen that is effective when matched with bright red lipstick.

Lightest Cream Urged in Summer

IF your skin is naturally oily, give up any type of make-up base for the summer, and use an iced astringent instead. But if you need a cream base, get one as light as possible. Let your skin breathe and keep it clean—that's the best treatment you can give it this summer.

Use tepid water, neither hot nor cold, in your bath and shower.

Don't spare the soap, and use it even after cleansing your face with cream, in order to remove all oil and dust from the pores. And go heavy on the iced colognes and deodorants.

Sprinkle your toes and the inside of your shoes with cooling foot talc powder.

If the morning light from wide-open windows interferes with your beauty sleep, try a dark eye-mask.

Don't concentrate on a completely frigid diet. At least one warm dish at each meal will aid digestion and make you feel cooler later on.

Wife Feels Puzzled, Wearied, Defeated by Her Husband's Talk of Divorce, After She Thought She'd Done a Fine Job of Accommodating to Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Soon after we married 10 years ago, I found that although my husband and I were compatible in many ways, our emotional needs were quite different. I was more ardent than he. Perhaps in those first days I was a poor sport. Young, hurt and bewildered at finding my kisses unwanted, I was quite a nag, I guess.

But after the birth of my first child I grew up and began to adjust myself to the situation, taking a busy interest in home, garden, children and outside activities. I felt very unselfish in not making demands on my husband, as he claimed I had done in honeymoon days. I actually thought, until recently, that I had done a beautiful job of accommodating to his temperament. Although it was lonely, going for weeks without so much as a peck on the cheek, still I did not complain.

She Cannot Now Understand Life

HOWEVER, a few weeks ago we had a serious talk that leaves me puzzled and weary, with a feeling of defeat. Jeff said he had thought for some time of divorcing me. He charged me with various faults, first and foremost of which are that I am "cold" and "unaffectionate." He feels I don't love him any more. I was so struck with the irony of this that I laughed hysterically. He missed the point, of course.

Since then we've had some further discussion and have reached an understanding. Neither of us can see any merit in divorce for us, as it would drastically affect the lives of our two children, who are happy and well adjusted, and worth any sacrifice, we feel. We both adore them and we do have a good "family relationship." We go together to the movies, picnics, etc., and show them fond interest generally.

I don't know whether I am looking to you for advice or for an explanation of what has happened. But I think I must need help, for I no longer understand anything in life. Please answer soon. V. C.

Self-Awareness Stirs Gentleness

DEAR V. C.: Apparently you and Jeff have a genuinely good attitude toward your children—openhearted and magnanimous. In relation to them, you experience satisfaction in bestowing happiness. As parents you are charitably disposed, in the tender true meaning of the term; and it is this mature feeling that you should approximate in the marriage also, if you are to dissolve the conflict that has persisted since the honeymoon.

The cultivation of a habitual process of self-discovery, that derives from steady awareness of the pitch of your emotional reaction to every happening, is the beginning of wisdom in co-adult associations. This practice of awareness automatically modifies one's behavior for the better. It clears the way to harmonious interchange, by making possible a sympathetic consideration of the other fellow's sensibilities.

"Know thyself" has been the urgent counsel of seers since the dawn of mankind's thinking history. This is the key to compassionate insight into troubled human nature, whether illustrated in one's own anxious conduct or another's disturbed performance. Here is the only means whereby we learn to arrive at righteous judgments, that are not deceived by surface appearances. But you and Jeff have made no advance in this direction as yet.

Felt Inadequate When They Married

OBVIOUSLY, each feels betrayed in regard to his expectations of the marriage partner. This indicates that each entered marriage in a spirit of inadequacy, counting on using the partner as an instrumentality in getting personal happiness.

Perhaps your husband wanted some ineffably tactful treatment that would, he hoped, disarm or overcome his inner isolationist drives—his psychological flight from the possibility of being vulnerable to heartbreak in a love relationship.

What were you after? It seems you attached inordinate importance to lovemaking, which signifies infantile self-love rather than openhearted appreciation of the partner's personality. The birth of your first child probably diminished this selfish ardor, disposing you to guard against pregnancy soon again. And from there you proceeded to snub Jeff, telling yourself you were being heroic, when actually you were championing your wishes as usual,—and moreover, conveniently "punishing" him for having rebuffed you earlier.

That's my reading of the situation, and it seems to me your ironic laughter wasn't a deeply honest rejoinder to Jeff's indignant feeling of being rejected. Since you've decided soberly to stay together, try to rise to mature relatedness, in which conjugal feeling is benevolent, not self-centered. M.H.

Hot Dog Means 150 Calories Less Bun

By Ida Jean Kain

IT seems highly improbable that many folks will peruse this column on the glorious Fourth . . . unless of course it's to find how many calories are in a hot dog. There are 150 calories in one large frankfurter and another 100 in the bun. For two, just double the count. A generous wedge of water melon counts another hundred. Soft drinks have 75 to 100 calories per bottle. Hard drinks pack more of a calorie punch.

But, as I say, who is going to do even light reading on such a holiday? Not those behind a steering wheel, which rules out quite a few. And not those floating happily in cool water, or sitting under the shade of the old apple tree enjoying a hearty picnic lunch . . . or wishing the fish would bite.

Of course I could discourse on sunburn, but that's not popular either. Authorities say the most ideal hours for sunbathing are from dawn until nine in the morning . . . but I ask you, who wants to set the alarm clock to sunbathe?

HOWEVER, it's easy to forget from one summer to the next just how potent Old Sol really is, so if this is your first touch of the sun here's a good safety rule to follow: Fifteen minutes in the direct rays of the sun between 10 in the morning and 3 in the afternoon is enough for a starter. And this is not just for sissies. Watch for danger signals. As soon as the skin is hot to the touch, cover up or get in the shade . . . ten minutes more may cause a severe burn.

So many nature lovers take to the great outdoors on this first real summer holiday, that some firms put up warning signs: "No time off for sunburn."

Maybe they ought to include a poison ivy warning . . . that can be worse and last longer than sunburn. In case you wouldn't recognize this little sprig of green if you met it in the woods or climbing a fence, it has a compound leaf composed of three leaflets . . . and it is painfully deceptive.

EARLY in the season the leaves are tiny leaflets and bright green; at this season they are bigger and not so bright and shiny; and to further confuse, they may be notched or plain. If you do not recognize it in all its forms, steer clear of every three-leafed plant.

Ah well, the Constitution promises everyone the right to the pursuit of happiness . . . so be as independent as you like and pursue it in your favorite way. And a happy Fourth of July to you!

"About 200 alumni live in the Washington, Maryland, and Virginia area," the young but silver-haired Miss Warren, '39, said. "Our meeting should be very successful, and I'm looking forward to seeing some old friends." The meeting will be at the Church of the Pilgrim, 22d st., between P and Q, at 8 p. m.

Business Gals Convene, Plug Equal Rights

They are attending the tenth biennial convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Opening the barrage was the outgoing president, Dr. Frances Scott of Northampton, Mass. She is the author of several books on health and hygiene and an associate professor of hygiene at Smith College. She declared:

There must be a new pattern in thinking with respect to women's place in the world.

Industrialization took them out of their homes, then it left the greatest unemployed force in history.

Division of work should not be on a basis of sex.

"In our civilization the job belongs to the person best fitted to do it. The distinction between men's work and women's work all but vanished during the last war. Our thinking has not kept pace with reality."

"What is democracy" she asked. "Is it material possessions and comforts, the so-called American standard of living? Or is it protection of opportunity to achieve?"

County Judge Sarah T. Hughes of Dallas was named as sole nominee for the presidency of BPW. Election will be held Friday, the last day of the convention.

U. S. Aid Held Needed to Meet School Crisis

St. Louis, July 3 (AP).—The president of the National Education Association made a renewed plea tonight for enactment of legislation for Federal aid to schools.

Speaking at the opening general convention session of the association, Andrew D. Holt said the school "crisis will reach calamity proportions unless substantial Federal assistance is forthcoming immediately."

The Nation faces "the almost certain prospect of an additional 7,500,000 students during the next decade," he said.

Holt reported membership in the NEA is 453,797, up 26,270 from last year and highest in the history of the organization. "We have the highest membership of any professional organization in the world," he said.

Noting an increase in public interest in education, Holt said that largely because of this every state in the nation has increased its support of public education during recent years.

"In 1940 the total expenditures for public elementary and secondary schools were about two and one-third billion dollars," he told the convention. "This year the expenditures will be more than four-and-a-half billion dollars.

"Average teachers' salaries during the decade have jumped from slightly more than $2000 to slightly less than $3000."

Greece Makes Progress, Says Ambassador

Greece is recovering from World War II and the ravages of guerilla warfare, Dr. Athanasios G. Politis, Greek Ambassador to the United States, told the Fourth National Pan-Macedonian Association Convention banquet at the Statler Hotel last night.

"The Greek people have now returned to work. Reconstruction in all fields is on the way," the Ambassador said.

He warned, however, that "Greece's only hope from now on is that some, at least, of her northern neighbors will, in their own interest, understand that cooperation in the long run pays better than aggression."

The Pan-Madedonian Association was organized to maintain Macedonia's status as part of Greece. Attempts have been made to give Macedonia autonomy, a fact the association maintains will lead to incorporation of the area as a satellite of Russia.

In a morning business session, the association passed a resolution: (1) Thanking the United States for its "wholehearted support" of Greece; (2) Saluting Greece as the first nation "to repulse decisively the invasion of the dark forces of communism;" (3) Protesting "the brutal conduct of the Balkan Communist-controlled countries . . . particularly the incomprehensible behavior of the Yugoslav government" towards Greece; and (4) Praising the United States for its stand on Korea.

Speakers at the banquet last night included Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio), N. C. De Paul, chief of the Greek-Turkish Section of ECA, and Leonard J. Cronie, of the State Department.

The convention, which opened Saturday, concludes Wednesday morning with the election of the association's national council.

Independent Candidates Show Large Gains in Peru Returns

Lima, Peru, July 3 (U.P.).—Independent candidates gained strongly on supporters of President Manuel Odria tonight in mounting returns from yesterday's congressional elections.

Official candidates were still ahead in the race to control the new congress, but late unofficial returns reversed early indications of an easy victory. It appeared certain there would be a strong opposition bloc in the new Legislature.

Partial returns from 16 of Peru's 24 departments showed Odristas deading in contests for 17 of the 50 Senate seats at stake and 62 of 153 places in the Chamber of Deputies. Independent candidates were leading by narrow margins in 11 Senate and 30 Chamber contests.

However, part of the Odrista strength came from districts in which official candidates were unopposed for office. Unofficial returns showed independents leading in most of the areas where the elections were contested.

In Lima, where the Odristas "split the vote" by nominating two candidates for each of the five Senate and 12 Chamber seats at stake, independents were running ahead of the divided government ticket in every race.

The president himself was unopposed for election and early results indicated that he had polled 80 percent of the possible vote.

Sentencing Of Morford To Be Friday

Richard Morford, executive director of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, Inc., is scheduled to be sentenced Friday in District Court on two counts of contempt of Congress.

Morford was convicted last Friday for refusal to turn over certain records of the American-Soviet organization to the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1946.

The case is an appeal to a 1948 conviction when Morford was given three months in jail and fined $250. Judge James W. Morris will pronounce sentence.

South Korea Thanks U. S., U. N. for Aid

Taejon, Korea, July 3 (AP).—The foreign minister of invaded South Korea today thanked the United States and United Nations for support.

Ben C. Limb issued a statement saying that "America's strong belief in liberty and freedom could not be better expressed than by her realistic action on this July 3, the eve of the United States Independence Day Anniversary."

The invaded republic's National Assembly today, at its fifth temporary session somewhere in Korea, thanked President Truman and the United Nations for its prompt assistance.

The message to resident Truman said:

"The people of Korea and all who defend freedom thank Your Excellency and the American people for their quick and adequate decision to extend military aid to Korea in order to defend democracy and uphold the principles of the United Nations.

To the United Nations went this message:

Until we completely overcome the root of this trouble which brings nothing but misery and disaster to the human race, we do expect your continuous aid in order to establish true peace in the world."

Both were signed by Assembly Chairman P. H. Shinicky.

Peron Backing U. S., He Tells Publishers

Buenos Aires, July 3 (AP).—President Juan D. Peron told a group of American publishers, editors and government officials today that he supports United States action in Korea.

"I am a profound partisan of peace, but not peace at the price of Communism," he said.

The president said all western hemisphere governments "ought to stand together to support" the United States action.

The visiting Americans came here on the inaugural flight of Pan American Airways' new high-speed service from New York to Buenos Aires.

Aussies Miss Home Leave to Join in Battle

An Air Force Base in Japan, July 3 (U.P.).—Many of the Australian fliers who took off from here today to pound targets in North Korea were only days away from home leaves when Australia offered its air power for United Nations police action.

But it was a smiling, joking bunch of pilots that roared away from this air base, wisecracking about their upset plans.

One group pounded locomotives, trains, trucks and armored weapons of North Korean forces north of Suwon and another escorted American B-26s in a bombing strike against highways leading from Seoul to the North Korean front lines.

Wing Commander L. T. Spence of Queensland, Australia, who led one group of Mustang fighters, and Flying Officer William Horsman of Sydney each reported destruction of a locomotive.

Returning fliers echoed questions raised at other bases yesterday: "What's happened to the Communist air force?"

They reported they encountered no North Korean planes and the Reds' antiaircraft fire was sporadic and ineffective.

Flying Officer Kenneth McLeod of Melbourne, who accompanied American B-26s in Sunday's raid on the Han River bridges below Seoul, said the attack was "perfect bombing."

Jehovah's Witnesses Banned in Poland

Warsaw, July 3 (AP).—The religious sect Jehovah's Witnesses has been banned in Communist-governed Poland, the Office of Religious Affairs said tonight.

The announcement said the Ministry of Public Safety found the sect had engaged in espionage and other activities directed against the safety of the state. Arrest of more than 50 members was announced Thursday.

Va. Amvets To Meet in 1951 In Richmond

Charlottesville, Va., July 3 (AP).—The Virginia Department of Amvets today selected Richmond as the site of its 1951 convention.

Next years' convention site was chosen by the group's State executive committee. Dates for the meeting have not been fixed.

At yesterday's session of the Amvets' convention here, delegates adopted a resolution recommending that an ultimatum be sent to North Korea demanding that it "surrender unconditionally under penalty of having the full armed might of this Nation, including the atomic bomb, unleashed against it."

The Amvets (American Veterans of World War II) commended President Truman's decision to send American forces to the aid of South Korea, and the organization's auxiliary later wired the Chief Executive to that effect.

On the home front, the Amvets renewed their opposition to a national bonus and declared their "firm opposition" to the poll tax as a Virginia voting prerequisite. In this connection, they urged all civic groups in the State to join in a fight for poll tax repeal.

New officers elected last night at the convention, which concludes today, were Allan N. Spitler of Charlottesville, commander; Bernard T. Cook, of Alexandria, finance officer; M. Phillip Katz of Alexandria, judge advocate; R. L. Welch of Vienna, provost marshal; and Human Saperstein of Alexandria, Paul N. Tennile of Portsmouth and B. F. Wingfield of Charlottesville, vice commanders.

The auxiliary elected Mrs. W. M. Sibley of Portsmouth, as State president, and Mrs. James E. Francis of Richmond, and Mrs. B. F. Wingfield, of Charlottesville, vice presidents.

Carl W. Allen of Arlington, was indorsed by the convention for the office of national vice commander at the national convention in Cleveland in September.

Alien Submarines Seen 40 Miles Off Manila

Manila, July 3 (AP).—The Philippines defense department announced today that foreign submarines had surfaced Sunday 40 miles from Manila.

A spokesman declined to say how many submarines were seen, saying simply "more than one." He said they were seen by soldiers and civilians to surface briefly in coastal waters off the coast of Quezon Province. Markings on the craft were not distinguishable from shore.

Rumors persist that submarines are being used to smuggle aliens into the Philippines. But this is the first official report that the craft actually have been seen in coastal waters.

The Philippine naval patrol has no submarines.

In Washington, the Navy Department said it had no information about the reported appearance of submarines.

But how Good are you in a Cold War?

THIS glorious Fourth reminds us that you and millions like you served our country magnificently in war time. No sacrifice was too great—even the final one.

But—what about this cold war? It's something new. The hardest kind of a war to fight the world has ever seen. No bands. No flags. No uniforms. No service stripes.

The way to help win the cold war seems so, well—so ordinary. It consists of being good citizens, full-time citizens, on the Fourth of July and every other day of the year.

Do you vote in every election in which you have a right to vote? Over 45 million Americans didn't take the trouble to go to the polls in the last presidential election.

Do you serve on juries when called? Some people brag of dodging this interesting and important duty.

Do you support good education through your Parent-Teachers' Association? Help make the decisions in your union?—or just go along paying your dues? Ever let those who represent you at the state Capitol or at Washington hear your views on what's good for the country?

Ordinary? No—this is the wonderful way and the only way to keep freedom bright. It is the way to checkmate "cold war" tactics by showing the world an inspiring example of democracy in action.

Our country is calling for 150 million men and women who will be full-time citizens 365 days in the year — beginning with you.

EVERY HOME should have this guide to the Rights and Duties of an American.

Do you know your rights? Do you know the nine keys to good citizenship . . . the how and why of each? You'll find all this useful information and many other interesting facts about your country in this handy little booklet. Big Groupings Here to Stay, Experts Told

NYHT News Service

San Francisco, July 3.—Whether Americans like it or not, big business, big labor and big government are here to stay, more than 3000 leading business and professional women were told here today in a panel discussion probing methods of holding "bigness" within reasonable bounds.

Asserting that "it is the business of government to be big in a country where nothing else is small," Dr. T. V. Smith of Syracuse University, said as long as a spirit of "good sportsmanship" prevails in a maintained two-party system, there was no need for concern about the size of government.

Analyzing the status of big labor, Mrs. Elinore M. Herrick, personnel director of the New York Herald Tribune, warned that the power of the large labor unions threaten to throw the Nation's economic structure out of kilter. Big labor must, to maintain the toleration of the Nation, if it is to raise the standard of living, and if it is to supply "even a minimum of the kind of social security that is being demanded," practice restraint and surrender some of its currently claimed privileges, Mrs. Herrick said.

The case of big business was presented by William S. Rosecrans, Western vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who said that the size of business is determined strictly by economic expediency, operating competitively with the best goods and services to the consumer.

Mr. Rosecrans said that in spite of the "propaganda and villification" against large corporations, certain industries, such as steel, chemicals and auto production function most efficiently for the public good as large entities, without direction form "master planners."

Canada Denies It Sent Truman List of A-Spies

Ottawa, July 3 (AP).—External Affairs Minister L. P. Pearson today described as "completely untrue" the statement of a New York importer that Canada had turned over a list of 150 "Soviet atom spies" in 1945 to President Truman. Pearson did not elaborate.

The importer, Alfred Kohlberg, said in an open letter to Representative Buchanan (D., Pa.) that President Truman received the list in 1945 from former Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

In a recent debate in the House of Commons, Pearson said that during the hearings of Canada's Royal Commission on Espionage in 1945 and 1946 some evidence came to light from a notebook owned by one of the suspects, who was later acquitted.

The notebook contained some 400 names and addresses. Among these were 150 names of persons living in Canada, 163 in the United States and five in Great Britain.

The names of the United States residents were turned over to U.S. security authorities with all the evidence available. The names of the residents of the United Kingdom were turned over to British authorities.

Falling Roof Pins Boy, 4, to Ground, Breaks His Leg

The roof literally fell in on 4-year-old George Lewis of Arlington yesterday when the one-car garage behind his home at 909 S. 20th st. collapsed. The falling roof pinned him to the ground.

The boy suffered a broken left leg and possible internal injuries. His condition was said to be fair at Arlington Hospital. His father, Albert L. Lewis, a civilian Army worker, said George and his brother, David, 3, were playing in front of the garage while a workman, Edward R. Kengla, 13 E. Rosemont ave., Alexandria, was demolishing it.

As the garage collapsed unexpectedly, David ran to safety, but George was pinned face down under the roof until Kengla freed him. The boy was taken to the hospital by the Arlington rescue squad.

Plane Scout Spots N. J. Cock Fight, 4 Seized, 50 Flee

Bedminster, N. J., July 3 (AP).—Four men were held in bail today in the operation of a cock fight arena on the large estate of a New York stock broker.

Twenty-three others were picked up at the scene as witnesses when polie raided the area yesterday. An airplane scout spotted the illegal game and police set up road blocks before closing in.

A warrant was issued for Roger D. Mellick, stock broker. Police said 50 others fled.

Held for grand jury action on charges of cruelty to animals, as owners of the birds, were McGhee Tyson Gilpin, 30, of Boyce, Va., Mellick's son-in-law; Vincent Hughes, 30, Somerville; Frank Donato, 62, Singac, and Carl L. Hildebrandt, 46, Rahway.

Socialists to 'Mourn' When Leopold Returns

Brussels, July 3 (U.P.).—A day of "national mourning"—tantamount to a general strike—will be ordered for part of Belgium when King Leopold III returns, Socialists said today.

Stores, offices and factories will be closed, the Socialists said, in the French-speaking part of the country where bpposition to the monarch is strongest. The Socialists said they will bar the King from the July 16 unveiling of the $400,000 memorial for 17,000 American soldiers killed in the Battle of the Bulge at Bastogne.

The Birth of Independence

The Declaration of Independence is a masterpiece of manifold virtues. It is one democracy's birth certificate as well as a testament of faith in people everywhere. Its eloquent cry of protest against despotism also embodied the doctrine for a better way of life. It recorded the heartbeats of a nation's aspirations and translated philosophical ideals into political realities. Hopes that had been the property of philosophers for centuries were taken from the realm of pure thought and joined the world of law . . . The document's challenge to 18th century tyranny is applicable to 20th century dictatorship: Its classic charter of liberty could serve as an editorial for today's newspaper. Moreover, the Declaration represents one of history's most magnificent prose poems.

Ideas can change the course of history only when they are rooted in the will of the people. Without that basis, the loftiest ideas are nothing more than pious wishes . . . As late as July 6, 1775, the American Congress formally disavowed any intentions of forming an independent gov't. But Tom Paine's pamphlet, "Common Sense," with its ringing demand for independence, captured the minds and hearts of the people and forged the will for independence. Jefferson shaped that will in the form of the Declaration.

On June 7, 1776, Richard Henry Lee rose on the floor of Congress and stunned the legislators with a dramatic resolution: "That these United Colonies are and of the right ought to be free and independent states, that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved."

Not all the legislators greeted the resolution with dancing in the aisles and a chorus of "Yankee Doodle." It provoked a fierce storm of debate which raged for days. Finally it was agreed that a committee of five be appointed to work on an independence declaration —and a vote on the resolution was postponed until July 1st.

After the committee instructed Jefferson to draw up the document, he promptly returned to the room he had rented in a bricklayer's home on Philadelphia's Market Street . . . There the 33-year-old genius labored in a 2x3 parlor on the manuscript which was to radically alter world history and place him among the immortals.

Within 17 days Jefferson turned out the masterful document which thundered against indecency and lit the horizons of civilization with lightning flashes of justice. These were the words for the music of angels.

After he had completed the initial draft, Jefferson showed it privately to Adams and Franklin. They suggested several minor corrections. Jefferson rewrote the entire document incorporating the suggested changes and then presented it to the committee—which approved it unanimously.

Jefferson titled it: "A Declaration by the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress Assembled."

When the text was placed before the entire Congress, it was reshaped via a major editing operation. Some representatives used a scalpel's deft touch to clip phrases; others deleted complete paragraphs with all the ruthless force of a meat cleaver . . . Throughout the cutting process Jefferson remained silent while seething within —as any author would in seeing his beloved brainchild undergoing surgery . . .Wily old Ben Franklin soothed the young author's ruffled feelings throughout the lengthy debate by whispering quips.

Jefferson heard the often stinging criticism of his work while taking notes of the proceedings, which lasted three days. So meticulous a diarist was he, he included every detail of the historic meeting—even noting the changes in the temperature of the room.

When the legislators concluded their editorial surgery one-fourth of the original manuscript's wordage had been clipped. Deletions included an attack against slavery—omitted for fear of offending South Carolina and Georgia. Many historians argue that if this section had remained in, it would have prevented the Civil War.

Congress adopted the Declaration on July 4th, but it didn't become official until July 19 when it was signed. Jefferson affixed his signature on August 2d.

It was not generally known Jefferson authored the document when it was made public. The historic declaration was publicly presented as the work of Congress as a whole . . . While Philadelphians were cheering the historic proclamation of liberty—Jefferson strolled through the happy throngs unrecognized.

Ironically, the Father of the Declaration was depressed by the Congressional version of his brainchild. The deletions had left deep wounds in his pride as an author. He was convinced Congress had mangled his original manuscript and depleted much of its power.

There is inspiring symbolism in the fact that a nation forged by immigrants and their descendants is gifted with a national birth certificate encompassing the thoughts of British, French and Italian philosophers—which was signed by eight Americans born abroad.

Americans were first informed that a new Nation was born when the Declaration was read in one of Philadelphia's public squares—now known as Independence Square . . . The words spread from mind-to-mind, from heart-to-heart throughout the Colonies . . . Bells clanged in cities and villages, fireworks brightened the skies, people sang in the streets. A new nation drew life from a living document: Its blood was liberty, its flesh was justice—and there were 13 stars in its eyes . . . Just as the initial birthday of the democratic manifesto was joyous—so have all succeeding anniversaries renewed the hopes of Americans. Devotion to its principles were affirmed by the Minute Men and reaffirmed by every American soldier from Valley Forge to Iwo Jima—to the American airmen now winging through the skies over Korea . . . The Declaration of Independence officially signifies history's most blessed event—the birth of civilization's greatest democracy.

Mr. and Mrs. America—Happy Birthday!

Air 'Wedding' Nearly Becomes Tragedy

This is the third in a series of six chapters in which Dick Grace, one of the most colorful fliers of all time, tells the story of his high adventures in the air. The series is a condensation of the recent book, "Visibility Unlimited," Longmans, Green.

By Dick Grace

CHAPTER THREE

Dick Grace

My barnstorming days included exhibitions, passenger carrying and charter work. Landing was on race tracks and pastures. There was no such thing as a regular landing strip in those years.

I did changes from plane to plane, test-piloting and intentional crashing of airplanes. Problems had to be solved in engineering those crashes so that, though injuries might occur, the crew and passengers might come through with their lives.

In 1919-20 aviation was in the thrill stage. Great numbers had as yet never seen an airplane fly. Comparatively few had ever been in one.

A great many of our customers wanted a first ride in a flying machine and the majority ordered a straight flight "not too high off the ground."

A grandmother of ninety wanted to try the "Go-devil." She enjoyed it. My mechanics and I spent a whole afternoon trying to extricate a fat man from a cockpit—for a while we visioned having to disassemble the fuselage. It cost us $500 in passenger flights.

There were those who would pay $15, get in the ship, wave a happy, silly good-bye—bravely daring God and the elements. After taxiing out they'd cover their eyes tightly with their hands and not uncover them until they touched ground again. They would swear that the sky was black, the earth beautiful—how close the sun was! And the thrill—the terrible thrill of it all!

One man, outwardly calm on the ground, "threw a fit" when in the air. He wanted to get out. I argued, pleaded, reasoned. He swore that if I wouldn't let him out he was going to jump. I was forced to hit him over the head with the fire extinguisher—a trusty old implement that served in more than one emergency. He enjoyed the flight.

First Air 'Wedding'

We had arranged for an appearance in a moderately sized village of Michigan—up in the mining district. It was rough country. We were promised all the passengers we could carry at 25 dollars a head.

Then we learned that the chief attraction was to be the "World's First Wedding in the Air". That involved me. Whatever they had cooked up I was part of it. But no one would be that insane. Did they think I could carry witnesses, a preacher, and whatever else it took to perform the ceremony?

Apparently I could. I would or we'd not be paid.

The next day the thousand foot runway was lined solidly with people. The mines shut down, stores closed.

The bride buxom and robust was introduced. Shyly standing by was a pale skinny and altogether unheroic figure—the bridegroom. He had a nervous affliction. His nose twitched with almost clocklike regularity.

The idea was simple. Very simple. The lucky couple would get into the front cockpit. The best man maid of honor and the preacher would stand by on the ground. I would take off. As I circled over the field the preacher would read the words. The "I do's" would be pronounced by the happy couple up above when the sheets were stretched out on the ground—one sheet for the bride, two for the groom. I would hand the ring to the groom. They would be married. Just like that.

The bride got in first. She had to. She was so big they couldn't possibly sit by side. If she sat on him he couldn't be seen. There was an argument. His parents didn't think it right that she hold him on her lap. It would look as if she were carrying him off. It did look as if she was his nursemaid. She got out; he got in. She sat a foot and a half out of the cockpit. His head was visible—but barely.

We took the air.

Everything was just dandy until the ring was needed. I had put it in the righthand side pocket of my trousers. The last thing I did was to put my coveralls that Al handed me over my trousers. To get through the slit in the coveralls, then into the pants pocket shouldn't be difficult.

Nearing the time for the rings, I stretched my leg, leaned over to make it easier, shoved my hip up and my hand down, found no slit in the coveralls. The ship was drifting badly with my foot off the rudder so I straightened, put the ship on course and paused.

Stretching for Ring

I heaved the hip higher, turned sideways, slid my hand down. Again. Again. There was no slit. It was Al! Al had sewed up that slit. He'd sewed up both of them.

The girl shouted something to me. I yelled back. The bridegroom could just be seen.

This was not funny.

If we landed without the ceremony completed it would make no difference to the waiting mob. I couldn't be heard. They couldn't explain, even if they had known the facts. As soon as I landed, the crowd would surge forward, carry them off. Rice, old shoes, toy balloons would sail through the air. Not even the fire department band would be heard, though they'd be blowing their heads red.

I had to ditch my coveralls. They fitted tightly—impossible to do without taking both hands from the controls. The second I did that the nose of the ship would go down, for it was rigged for a medium load.

The suit was unbuttoned. With crazy haste my hand left the control column, ripped the thing from my shoulders. The ship dipped. I contorted my body so that one hand reached the stick, pulled the nose high.

The lady let out a shriek of joy. An involuntary one. The groom was nowhere to be seen.

The next try freed an arm. On the fifth I reached the box, handed over the ring. I moved my lips as I thought of Al.

We headed fieldward. They'd had a rollicking, roller-coaster marriage—if it was legal. Anyway, that wasn't my worry.

My mind was on Al. I didn't care that there had been no witnesses up there. It didn't matter that they'd been tied by a couple of bed sheets and she had put the ring on her own finger because the groom had fainted.

All I wanted to do was get my hands on Al.

Ike to Start Fireworks at Scout Session

Valley Forge, Pa., July 3 (AP).—"Let 'er Rip" three little words that made history in World War II—provided the chief campfire conversation piece today at the Boy Scouts' second national Jamboree.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower spoke those words in starting the channel invasion of Nazi-held Europe June 6, 1944.

The former Allied Supreme Commander will repeat that order Tuesday night to touch off a fireworks display for the 47,000 campers.

Among the displays will be a blazing likeness of the Statue of Liberty and one of the Boy Scout badge. Another features a big silk American flag, will be shot skyward and will unfurl and float to earth by means of a parachute as aerial flares illuminate it.

Earlier, 8000 Scouts will participate in a pageant—"Scouting across the Nation," including costumed characters portraying everything from Indians to pioneers in covered wagons.

Fire Damages Nursery School

Fire, which started from an overheated refrigerator motor, burned out the inside of the Brookland Junior School, a nursery school at 9706 47th pl., Hollywood, Md., yesterday afternoon.

The contents of the two-story, asbestos shingle building were saved by firemen. Mrs. Dorothy Doyle, who operates the school, was away at the time.

Firemen from College Park, Branchville and Berwyn Heights responded.

Nine Countries Get $21,227,000 More in ECA Aid

Nine western European countries yesterday were granted an additional $21,227,000 in Marshall Plan aid.

Spending approvals announced by the Economic Cooperation Administration provided $16,187,000 to buy goods in the United States and $2,240,000 for purchases elsewhere. Another $2,800,000 was furnished for ocean freight costs.

Germany will get $16,700,000 for cotton, industrial and metal working machinery and machine tools. France is to get $6,007,000 for goods and services required in a steel plant expansion project and for feeds and fodders.

Other grants include:

Austria, $2,865,000; Italy, $3,520,000; Greece, $1,545,000; Holland, $1,040,000; Denmark, $500,000; Turkey, $735,000, and Iceland, $15,000.

Police Plea By Germany Restudied

Frankfurt, Germany, July 3 (AP). John J. McCloy, United States High Commissioner, said today the occupation authorities now are willing to reconsider the Bonn government's request for a central West German polic force.

Western Germans, who fear an attack from the East like that in Korea, have asked for 25,000 federal police, presumably to offset the 50,000 East German people's police.

Just 12 days ago—four days before the Korean Communist attack on the South Korean republic, the Western high commission in effect rejected the Bonn request. The High Commissioner said local police units could be united temporarily to meet an emergency, but authorized nothing like a federal police force.

The Allies have carefully restricted German police to a state level, remembering it was a centralized police which upheld the rule of Hitler. Today, however, McCloy said the Allied High Commission "has expressed its willingness to consder" the German proposal. He added experts have ben ordered to confer with German representatives.

"No military implications are involved" in whatever consideration is given to the problem, he declared, and the American position will not be determined until the details of German desires are learned. McCloy attacked the East Zone government which claims to speak for all Germany, saying:

"It has become increasingly self-evident in the last year that the East Zone government is nothing more than a puppet of the Soviet regime. Since the attack on South Korea it has become clear to all the world what dangers are inherent in these puppet governments."

"These extremist groups command only negligible support and as the number of the parties indicates they are disunited even among themselves," he commented. He favors relaxation of all Allied controls in Germany "except those which help us keep Germany from backsliding." He expressed confidence that Germany one day will be reunited, but on a "free election, nonsatellite" basis.

Big 3 Diplomats Eye Freer Germany

London, July 3 (AP).—American, British and French diplomats met today to figure out how a freer West Germany can be hitched more closely to the west.

They are preparing the ground for the Big Three Foreign Ministers who in the fall are expected to: End the state of war between West Germany and the Western Allies; relax western power controls over the way in which west Germany runs her affairs; work out how West Germany can begin to pay off some of the debts which prewar Germany owed to other nations.

After a short plenary session the conference split up into various committees.

Czech Oil Find Reported Seized by Moscow

Belgrade, July 3 (NYHT.).—The Soviet Union has seized complete control of another important economic property in one of its satellite states in Central Europe, Premier Marshal Tito's anti-Soviet press reported today.

In Czechoslovakia, Moscow was said to have appropriated the oil and natural gas fields near Malacky. The report was carried by the Yugoslav "Review of International Affairs."

The story of the seizure was told as follows:

Czechoslovak geologists discovered the "rich" fields early this year. They extend over a 10-mile stretch from Malacky in Slovakia to the border of the Soviet-occupied zone of Austria. They lie adjacent to the Zistersdorf oil fields in Austria which are being exploited by Moscow.

The Czech pro-Soviet government sent a urgent request to Moscow for equipment and engineers to speed development of the newly-discovered resources. Soviet geologists arrived from Zistersdorf. After a swift examination "they began building barracks on the fields and simply informed the Czech technicians to go home."

FCC Must Decide

Color Has a Role In the TV Freeze

By James Marlow

A man writes in: "Why doesn't my city have more than one television station? And when does it look like there'll be more than one?"

He's not the first to ask that question, since the Government has not approved a license for a new TV station since October 1, 1948. It came about this way:

If you want to open a new radio or TV station, you can't do so unless you get a license, which means permission and approval from the Federal Communications Commission.

The FCC is the Government agency which controls radio and TV. In the fall of 1948, with hundreds of applications for licenses for new TV stations on hand, the FCC suddenly announced:

No more licenses would be approved for an indefinite time. Since then, almost two full years ago, the FCC hasn't approved one.

There are now 103 TV stations operating and six more being built. When finished, they'll start business. But the license applications of all 109 were okayed by FCC before its freeze order late in 1948.

(The FCC has on hand 351 frozen applications from would-be TV station owners, all waiting for the FCC's go-ahead).

Distribution Problem

BUT WHAT caused the freeze anyway? The FCC has some explanations which can be boiled down to something like this:

1. There is interference between some of the TV stations already operating. Which means: Transmitters are bothering one another because there's not enough distance between them. And—

2. There's lack of room for new stations until some adjustments are made about distributing the air waves differently—in order to give TV stations more air-wave room in which to operate.

Comes the question: Since the freeze was put in almost two full years ago, when is FCC going to get around to straightening out the air-wave problem and letting more new stations get built?

There's no definite answer from the FCC. But its chairman, Wayne Coy, said some weeks ago that it hopes to be able to lift the freeze around the end of 1950 and begin okaying licenses for new stations in 1951.

Three Choices

FOR MORE than six months, covering the latter part of 1949 and the early part of 1950, the FCC held dreary, technical hearings on color TV. The question was:

Is color TV sufficiently advanced to be given to the public? And, since more than 4,000,000 black and white TV sets have been sold to the public, then—

How can the TV industry provide color shows in such a way that the present black-and-white sets in homes can continue to be useful?

More than a year ago, the FCC asked that anyone who had a color TV system which could be fitted into present black-and-white sets step up and show it. Only three outfits stepped up at the hearings with complete systems, ready to show the FCC.

They were RCA (Radio Corporation of America), CBS (Columbia Broadcasting System) and CTI (Color Television, Inc., of San Francisco).

FCC is expected—perhaps this summer—to make its choice from among those three as to the one it will allow to operate. But—

Then, FCC will begin hearings on the question mentioned earlier: How to provide more air-wave room for more stations. Then, as Coy said, the FCC hopes by the end of the year to lift the freeze on new TV stations.

Achilles Heel

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis are back from the East after a remarkable achievement—topping Milton Berle.

A reporter asked Lewis, the funny man of the duo, how he was able to beat Berle.

"Very simple," he replied. "I didn't try to play smart. I was very humble—just the funny little kid who did crazy things. That threw him off completely."

Sand Makes Emergency Run to Dispensary

Les Sand, the WOL-WTTG clown, became involved in an almost unbelievable experience the other night.

As he drove up to his Silver Spring home in a heavy rain, he noticed that a middle-aged woman was out in the road, trying to hail him.

"I'm in terrible pain and I've got to get to a dispensary," she exclaimed as Les pulled up to a stop. "I can't get a cab in this weather—could you take me?"

Les suspected that it might be a holdup attempt, or some kind of trick. But the woman's distress seemed genuine enough, so there was nothing to do but play the Good Samaritan.

"I'm new out here," said Les, "and I don't even know where the dispensary is. But if you can direct me, I'll drive you over."

"Oh, good, good," she said as she climbed in the car. "I'll show you just where it is."

She directed him out to Colesville rd., and then down toward Georgia ave. At the corner, she breathed a sigh of relief.

"There it is," she said, "and thank goodness it's still open."

"Where?" asked the baffled Sand. "I don't see any hospital."

"I'm not going to a hospital," she explained. "I've got a terrible toothache, and I'm going to the liquor dispensary to get a quart of whiskey."

Les recalls the incident without embarrassment. "I know I'm a sucker," he says. "Go ahead and laugh. That's what I did, too, when she got to the punch line."

COINCIDENCE DEPT.

Appropriately enough, he's Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, retired chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and grandson of President U. S. Grant. He's celebrating No. 69 today.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Once again the news columns tell of children who were trapped in an abandoned ice box, and died.

The Washington Post carried an article suggesting means for disposing of these death traps. But it seems to me that the simplest and quickest way to avoid the danger is to remove the latch.

Five minutes with a screwdriver is all that's needed. Then the box can be set aside and disposed of at the owner's convenience, and the danger is removed. Elinor H. Ostrander.
2902 Jamestown rd.,
Hyattsville, Md.

Dear Elinor:

In legal terms, an abandoned icebox is "an attractive nuisance." Like an unprotected excavation or a ladder left provocatively propped against a second-story window, you just know that the kids won't be able to resist it.

Sure they have no business monkeying around on, or with, other people's property. But they always do.

So I guess we older folks ought to make sure we don't create any attractive nuisances for the children to get into.

When I was a kid, I almost broke my neck exploring an unfinished building near our house. "Haven't I told you never to climb around on that scaffolding?" my mother scolded.

"Yes," I replied between sobs, "but the watchman should have chased me, and he didn't."

Bill.

YEP, SURE IS

Arch McDonald on a recent broadcast, after a recorded testimonial stated that a druggist has been smoking Chesterfields for 27 years:

"That's a long time for a man to smoke one cigarette."

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

"I have no use for a streetcar pass," writes Mary N. Lazarus of 1929 3d st. se. "So I just buy 12 tokens each week.

"Heretofore, they cost me 35 cents less than a pass. But with the new rates in effect, I'll be saving 40 cents each week.

"ETERNAL VIGILANCE IS THE PRICE OF LIBERTY"

The Russkies might have a better understanding of what we're doing in Korea if they went back to 1790 and read these lines by John Philpot Curran:

"It is the common fate of the indolent to see their rights become a prey to the active. The condition upon which God hath given liberty to man is eternal vigilance; which condition if he break, servitude is at once the consequence of his crime and the punishment of his guilt."

If Curran had written those lines in 1950, he might have said "You can't have 'peace in our time' without working for peace for all time. Free men must fight tyranny wherever they encounter it."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

East-West Trade Stirs Debate

By Drew Pearson

A raging controversy of great importance is being threshed out secretly inside the National Security Council. It involves the cutting off of all British, French and Western European exports to Russia, which, in turn, would cost Uncle Sam nearly three billions a year.

Pearson

The issue was brought to a head by letters from Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer and Munitions Board Chairman Hubert E. Howard to the Security Council. These notes ask the State Department to demand that Atlantic Pact allies enforce a complete trade embargo with Communist nations.

At present the Atlantic Pact nations undertake to curtail shipment of strategic materials to Iron Curtain countries, but non-strategic materials have been shipped in normal trade channels for some time; and West European economists point out that it would throw their economy completely out of gear if these shipments were cut off.

They point out that Western Europe depends on the East for grain, ores and raw materials, and as a market for its manufactured goods. In a normal prewar year, 1938, the West-East trade amounted to three million dollars. Last year the figure was $2,600,000,000, despite an embargo on key munitions equipment.

Secretary of State Acheson and ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman laid before the Security Council data to show a shut-off of this trade would bring widespread unemployment, rationing, and political instability in Western Europe. For example, Communism is being licked in northern Italy, ironically, because the shipbuilding industry is making and selling small boats to Poland and Russia.

The State Department has been negotiating for two years to shut down the export of critical items, and Great Britain now has a security list known as "Group 17" of banned exports to Communist areas.

But United States military leaders take a vigorous view on the sale of various other commodities. They demand, for instance, that duck feathers be placed on the prohibited list, because they are used to line aviators' suits. The generals also demand that all ball bearings, including those used in ball-point pens, be barred from the Iron Curtain.

W. Averell Harriman, the new "cold war" coordinator, who got into the fight this week, commented: "Instead of trying to overturn the economy of Western Europe, we ought to look at our luxury trade with Russia. Dollars paid for Russian furs are used to buy armaments and strategic materials in South America."

Note—Secretary Johnson blames Secretary Acheson for hexing the Sawyer plan to cut off West-East European trade. But what Johnson neglects to say is that Truman himself said "no," on the ground that it would cost the United States Treasury at least $2,600,000,000 to compensate for upsetting this commerce.

Atomic Pie

A piece of lemon meringue pie almost put the Nation's top general out of commission during the height of the Korean crisis.

Gen. Omar Bradley was weak and running a temperature during the recent White House and Blair House meetings. Finally ordered to the hospital by the President, his illness was diagnosed as food poisoning. The destructive morsel was a piece of lemon meringue pie the general ate at Anchorage, Alaska, en route home from Japan.

When Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson heard this diagnosis, he gulped:

"General Bradley only had one piece of that pie," he said. "I ate two."

Secret Deal

It was Maine's Republican Senator Brewster who slyly wielded the ax on his fellow Maine Republican, Sumner Pike, as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Pike has served in the Government for years, having been a GOP member of the Securities and Exchange Commission and a wartime officials in OPA. He has also been a Republican member of the Atomic Energy Commission ever since it was established, and is one of the few Republicans chosen by Truman to become chairman of a Government agency.

However, Pike follows a policy much closer to the other GOP Senator from Maine, liberal Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, who does not get along with Brewster. Furthermore, though Brewster did not tell this to other Senators, Pike is thinking of running against him in 1952.

So Brewster worked out a deal, with the backing of Democratic Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia, by which Pike would be defeated for Senate confirmation.

On the surface, Brewster was back in Maine and glum Senator Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa led the GOP-Republicrat drive against Pike. However, Brewster had made an informal agreement whereby Republicans would vote against Martin A. Hutchinson, a sworn foe of the Senator Harry Byrd machine in Virginia, in return for conservative Democrat votes against Pike.

Hutchinson's nomination for Federal Trade Commissioner was voted unfavorably 5 to 3 by the Senate Interstate Committee. Later, when Pike's name came before the Atomic Energy Committee, the plot was so well carried out that Administration forces were completely taken by surprise.

"What's going on here?" asked the amazed Senator Tom Connally of Texas. "I didn't know anyone was against Sumner Pike. What are the objections?"

None of the GOP-Dixiecrat objectors said a word. Chairman Brien McMahon of Connecticut asked if any member wanted to question Pike. Still silence. Commissioner Henry Smyth asked to be heard for Pike. So did all the other commissioners, including Republican Thomas Murray. Their endorsement was met in silence. Naturally since they could not talk about the deal and could make no real objection to Pike, they had nothing to say.

But when the votes were counted, the committee was 5 to 4, against.

All the Republicans plus Republicrat Ed Johnson of Colorado, said "no." Johnson is chairman of the same committee, that said nix to Hutchinson by a secret vote.

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

When in the Course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation. — We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. — Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world. — He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good. — He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them. — He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only. — He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures. — He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people. — He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within. — He has endeavoured to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands. — He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers. — He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries. — He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance. — He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our Legislatures. — He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power. — He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation: — For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us: — For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States: — For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world: — For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent: — For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury: — For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences — For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies: — For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments: — For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever. — He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us. — He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people. — He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation. — He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands. — He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions. — In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people. — Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. — We, therefore, the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. — And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor.
